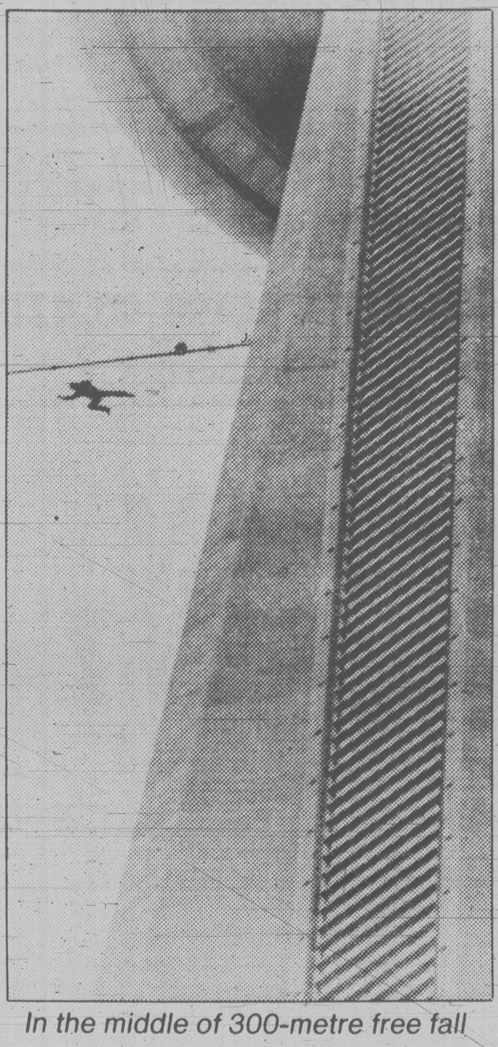
300 metres and no chute



In the middle of 300-metre free fall

TORONTO (CP) — Dar Robinson placed his feet safely on the ground after a successful jump of almost 300 metres from the CN Tower today and told a crowd of onlookers "I was 33 but now I'm 50."

"Does this show you how I feel?" he asked, extending a shaky hand to a group of schoolchildren and reporters.

Robinson, 33, who completed the stunt for a one-hour, ABC-TV program to be aired in October, executed a free-fall for more than two-thirds of the way down, held only by a wire cable attached to his waist and to a braking device controlled by engineers on the roof of the tower's sky pod.

His arms and legs swung wildly and he let out a couple of yells before the cable stopped him about 60 metres short of the ground and he was slowly lowered to safety.

"All I could hear when I looked down was my heart thumping and the wind whistling. You have to completely divorce yourself from all emotion and think purely of technical things."

The California resident, who has performed such stunts as a free fall from the top of the Houston Astrodome onto an air bag, said between sips from a bottle of champagne that he had no sensation of falling when he first stepped off the platform.

Robinson had planned to jump last Thursday but a defect in his equipment — which he designed for about $8,000 — caused a delay until Monday. That attempt was cancelled when wind speed rose above Robinson's acceptable level of 30 kilometres an hour.

Despite good weather conditions today and two backup systems, Robinson said he risked several serious problems.

A lack of aerodynamic control could have caused him to spin and become entangled in the cable and a sudden gust of wind could have propelled him into the side of the tower. Also, he was falling at a speed of about 190 kilometres an hour, making his 170-pound weight about 10 times that number and creating a stress that risked snapping the wire.

Canada no longer leader in jobless

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — For the first time in three years, Canada today shed the unhappy distinction of reporting the highest unemployment rate in the western world.

Figures released this morning show the jobless rate fell in July to 7.6 per cent, from its June level of 7.8 per cent. Although the numerical drop was small, it was important from a psychological standpoint. It allowed Canada to drop into second place in the world ranking, behind the United States which reported a July unemployment rate of 7.8 per cent. Canada has persistently reported the worst unemployment rate in the industrial world since 1977.

Officials at Statistics Canada warned that the country could soon be back in first place. "We've been above the U.S. for most of the year and this could very well be a temporary change," said a spokesman for the agency.

Canada is still reporting a far higher unemployment rate than most European nations and Japan. Latest available international statistics — covering the first three months of the years — show unemployment rates of 1.9 per cent in Japan, 6.3 per cent in France, 3.1 per cent in West Germany, 6.0 per cent in Italy, 6.2 per cent in Britain and 1.8 per cent in Sweden (The British figure has climbed rapidly since these figures were published and is hovering close to seven per cent).

There were 852,000 Canadians officially out of work last month, compared to a June figure of 887,000. This was the fourth consecutive monthly decrease.

In British Columbia the rate fell to 6.6 per cent, in Manitoba to 5.4 per cent and in Quebec to 9.9 per cent.

There were larger decreases in Ontario where it slipped to 6.9 per cent from 7.5 per cent. In Alberta, where unemployment is lower than all the other provinces, the rate dropped to 3.7 per cent from four per cent.

However, serious pockets of unemployment remain throughout the country. Windsor, the city hardest-hit by the slump in the auto industry reported an unemployment rate of 12.7 per cent last month, the highest for any Canadian city. Residents of that city say the real rate is closer to 20 per cent. Some workers still believe they are on temporary lay-off and others have become so discouraged that they have stopped looking

Study urges crackdown on welfare

An internal report leaked to the NDP calls for a crackdown on welfare fraud by forcing single parents back to work.

The report recommends unexpected spot checks of homes and refusal to replace a recipient's lost or stolen money.

The staff report to a senior official in the human resources ministry says too many social workers "let their hearts rule their thinking" and instead they should stress accountability in the handling of public funds.

Outside the house she cited the recommendations as proof of the provincial government's "preoccupation with an assault on the dignity of people."

The report from Roy Johnson, human resources co-ordinator, to Sam Travers, executive director of general administration, also recommends:

—Rotating the caseload of the ministry's financial aid workers "to avoid too much favoritism;"

—Refusing to provide more than minimal temporary assistance to anyone who can't produce identification;

—Checking with employers of welfare recipients with part-time jobs to confirm earnings and to learn whether full-time work is available.

Johnson says in his May 28 report that his findings are meant to be constructive criticism without attempting to take into account the social problems influencing the potential abuse of welfare money.

"We must recognize the fact that all applicants are not honest and the system is so easy to beat if we continue to accept all statements without some measure of verification," the report says.

"Some of our people tend to try too hard to prove the clients' eligibility instead of placing the onus on them."

Johnson says single parents, who are classed as unemployable by human resources policy, are "a real drain on the system and, in many cases, wrought with fraud."

He recommends that B.C. adopt a position similar to Alberta, where single parents would be retrained for work and some child care provided.

Mrs. Brown said the report unfairly steroetyped welfare recipients as dishonest people.

Canadians keeping spirits up

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians consumed 2.36 billion litres of alcohol during the year ending March, 1979 — about 100 litres a person, although it varies by province.

The cost of all that alcohol is $4.37 billion — about $185 a person.

Figures released by Statistics Canada Monday showed that the volume of spirits, wine and beer consumed is about the same as the year ended March 31, 1978.

The cost, however, has increased by nine per cent.

In both Manitoba and British Columbia the sales volume of alcohol dropped by about 11 per cent, due to brewery stikes. Sales in Alberta changed only fractionally. During the year Manitobans bought an average of 77 litres each, those in B.C. and Alberta about 95 litres each.

Carter wooing Kennedy

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

NEW YORK — President Jimmy Carter, assured of the Democratic presidential nomination, today began seeking the support of challenger Edward Kennedy hours after the Massachussetts Senator withdrew from the Democratic Party race.

Kennedy conceded the nomination after Democrats defeated a bid Monday night to "open" the party's 38th national convention, a move that would have freed delegates from voting pledges made during spring primary elections. Delegates voted 1936 to 1390 to reject Kennedy's effort to open the convention, and thus cleared the way for Carter's nomination Wednesday night.

"President Carter's forces have won an impressive victory," Kennedy told tearful supporters at his Waldorf Astoria hotel headquarters.

"I am a realist and I know what this means. . . . My name will not be placed in nomination."

The surprise announcement signalled the end of Kennedy's nine-month, uphill fight to wrest the nomination from Carter.

Almost immediately, Carter and Kennedy aides began negotiations on a deal that would allow the Democrats to emerge united from this week's convention.

Kennedy pledged to continue his fight to liberalize the Democratic party platform, which will be debated today. But whether the Carter campaign is ready to make concessions on the platform is not clear.

Gov't to appeal helmet ruling

The provincial government will appeal Monday's provincial court ruling in Vancouver that motorcyclists are not required to wear helmets.

The decision to take the case to the B.C. Supreme Court, instead of attempting to enforce the helmet rule by cabinet order, was announced today by Transport Minister Alex Fraser.

He estimated a delay of three to six months before the case comes to court.

In the meantime, motorcyclists in B.C. will be able to ride bareheaded.

The attorney-general's office has instructed B.C. police forces to stop laying charges against cyclists who ride without helmets.

The provincial court ruling in Vancouver shot down a section of the Motor Vehicle Act which makes wearing a helmet mandatory.

Judge Cyril Woodliffe ruled that the act does not give the superintendent of motor vehicles the authority to regulate the use of helmets. This authority lies with the B.C. cabinet, he said.

Fraser said as far as he is concerned, motorcyclists should wear helmets regardless of the law.

"I'm certainly in favor of making it mandatory to wear helmets," he said.

Neil McDiarmid, assistant deputy attorney-general, said the department will be considering either an appeal of the decision or a recommendation that the act be amended.

"Our hope is that the more responsible motorcyclist will continue wearing helmets as a good safety measure," McDiarmid said.

"If they chose not to wear them, we can only regret that they took that choice."

Dwight Currie, a 33-year-old machinist, was ecstatic after the judge dismissed three charges against him of riding a motorcycle without an approved helmet. When he was charged, Currie was wearing an imitation 1914 leather helmet.

Currie said he will no longer be wearing a helmet.

His lawyer, Jim McNeney, who also rides a motorcycle, said he will decide whether to wear a helmet depending on the circumstances surrounding his ride.

Storm toll doubles to 270

Rescue teams sent to isolated villages on the impoverished Caribbean island of Haiti, battered by Hurricane Allen a week ago today, dug out an additional 140 bodies, doubling the storm's death count to over 270 today.

Haitian officials Monday night reported finding the bodies in southwestern areas of the island leveled by Allen's 273-km/h winds and warned the toll might rise still higher. A total of 220 Haitians died in the worst hurricane in east Caribbean history.

Meanwhile, the remnants of the hurricane dealt Texas a parting blow with widespread flooding Monday and dissolved into a soggy mess over Mexico.

A deluge that brought up to 40 centimetres of rain to some areas as the storm passed drove thousands from their homes Monday, but many others among the 200,000 storm evacuees began heading home.

Corpus Christi police reported finding two apparent hurricane victims in the city's North Beach area. The body of Ruby Bohler, 63, was found in a partially submerged station wagon that had been washed into a ditch, police said. She was believed to be the storm's first victim in the U.S., not counting two others who died of heart attacks.

Later in the day, police found the body of a 52-year-old man along the North Beach shore. He was not identified, and the circumstances of his death were not known.

The cost of damage done in Texas by Hurricane Allen will probably exceed $200 million.

In Vancouver, meanwhile, the daughter of the prime minister of St. Lucia appealed Monday for Canadians to aid the small West Indian island badly damaged by the hurricane.

Mariela Louisy said she reached her father, Prime Minister Allan Louisy, after several days during which all communications to the island were cut. He told her the hurricane has caused vast destruction.

"His words to me were, 'We have no food and we need it desperately,' " said Louisy who has lived in Vancouver for six years.

In Calgary, Pearce Louisy, brother of the St. Lucia prime minister, has arranged with the Red Cross for donations to be sent to the island for food and clothing.

Louisy said money donations would be best because food and clothing is expensive to transport.

Village pub bags prize in U.K.'s fowlest race

LONDON (AP) — A village pub won the great British grouse race today on the frantic start to the annual grouse-shooting season.

It took just three hours for freshly shot birds to be rushed 800 kilometres from the moors of Scotland to the Onslow Arms at West Clandon near Guildford, 50 km southwest of London. It was the third straight year the pub has had the gourmet fowl on its menu before the big London hotels.

Three members of the British Army's Red Devils parachute team, dressed as chefs, carried the birds the last stage from London's Heathrow Airport, parachuting into the pub's parking lot.

It was just three hours after the grouse had been bagged near Galashiels, Scotland, then flown by helicopter to Edinburgh and on to London via a scheduled passenger jet.

A rival bid by London's luxury Ritz Hotel failed because a specially chartered plane was delayed by fog in Perthshire. The Ritz had hoped to get its grouse in time for "a late lunch."

The London Hilton said it isn't interested.

"Winning depends on shooting the birds early," said a spokesman. "We don't like to shoot the grouse at dawn because at that time they don't have the strength to fly away."

But insiders hinted she was probably bluffing.

They said the Hilton laid on a Daimler limousine complete with two pluckers aboard to make the feathers fly as the birds were rushed to London, thereby saving vital time.

One purist on the subject of grouse, which belong to the Tetraonidae family of game birds, was quoted in The Times as saying: "Normal people don't eat freshly shot grouse. It should be hung for several days."

Unemployment rate declines for work. (In order to qualify as officially unemployed, a person has to actively looked for a job in the last four weeks).

Analysts at Statistics Canada noticed a couple of peculiarities in the July statistics. At a time of relatively high unemployment, the retail industry seems to be booming, hiring new staff and reporting strong sales. At the same time, the business management industry — consultants, office personnel and service companies — is suffering its first downturn in five years. Officials are mystified by both of these aberrations in the country's normal employment patterns.

Otherwise, the unemployment situation is much as usual; the young and the East Coast hardest hit. Newfoundland, for instance reported an unemployment rate of 13.7 per cent last month — almost double the national average.

July unemployment among students and those just out of school was down from the previous month, but still extremely high.

For the group with the highest unemployment rate — young people aged 15 to 24 who attended school in March but did not plan to return to school in the fall — the rate dropped to 19 per cent from 19.8 per cent in June.

Women in the group had a 21.1-per-cent unemployment rate in July while 17.2 per cent of the men were unemployed.

The rate for students who plan to return to school in the fall was also down from the previous month. The drop was to 13.3 per cent from 16.5 per cent.

Jobless 7.9% here

Southern Vancouver Island's unemployment rate edged up to 7.9 per cent in July from 7.3 per cent in June following a summer layoff in some logging camps.

In the region from Sooke to Ladysmith 1,200 loggers are taking extended holidays because of a surplus of logs in sawmills.

About 300 of them are in the capital district.

Statistics Canada said the southern Vancouver Island unemployment survey is based only on a small sample and is not seasonally adjusted.

Carter woos Kennedy

paign, said he is optimistic Kennedy will now support the president against Republican challenger Ronald Reagan this fall.

But Hamilton Jordan, deputy director of the campaign and Carter's former top aide, said "major differences persist between the two men on issues such as the economy, energy and social programs."

Some Democrats interpreted Kennedy's graceful withdrawal as a clear sign he will stand behind Carter this fall.

But Kennedy supporters, whose disenchantment with the president increased over the past year as the nomination race grew more bitter, may not all follow the senator's gesture of loyalty. Some of them may be drawn to the campaign of Independent John Anderson whose liberal positions threaten to syphon off some Democratic support this fall.

The crucial rules fight got the convention off to a chaotic start. Delegates squabbled over the most democratic way to select a presidential nominee and the two camps jockeyed for influence among state delegations.

But in the end, the Kennedy camp was able to attract only slightly more than 100 defections from the Carter quarter.

The rules challenge prolonged the suspense of the Democratic race and forced the Carter campaign organization to keep a tight rein on delegates disenchanted with the president's economic record and revelations of his brother Billy's ties with Libya.

The Kennedy campaign was rejuvenated by the rules challenge. Public opinion polls until recently showed the Massachusetts senator gaining on Carter among Democrats.

Also joining in the rules challenge were several dozen Democratic congressmen worried about their own re-election chances with Carter on the ticket in November.

The congressmen, mostly junior members of the House of Representatives, maintained there was no way Carter could beat Reagan next fall.

Carter resisted pressure to release his delgates from some senior Democrats such as Senate majority leader Robert Byrd, who felt the president would be in a stronger position politically if he were nominated by an open convention.

ISN'T YOUR FAMILY WORTH THE MONEY?

Many people buy wagons in order to get increased passenger space and cargo area. But how many people ever consider the safety of the most precious cargo they'll ever carry—their families? Volvo owners do. And here's why they pay a little extra to own one.

STRUCTURAL SAFETY–IN A VOLVO, THE ODDS AREN'T STACKED AGAINST YOU.

In Volvo, a high strength steel cage surrounds a passenger compartment specifically designed to resist physical damage in a collision. Tubular steel bars, braced by a patented Volvo design protect you from side collisions.

Special "crumple zones" built into a Volvo's frame reduce impact forces which act on the passenger compartment. Steel profiles built into the roof keep you covered. And the six box-shaped steel pillars which support the roof are also designed to support the weight of six more Volvos.

VOLVO FAMILIES ARE HAPPY FAMILIES.

Statistics have already shown that 9 out of 10 Volvo owners are happy with their cars. Because Volvos also offer high levels of quality, reliability, comfort, performance and handling. Things not generally associated with station wagons.

So before you buy a wagon, stop in at our Volvo showroom. We may be able to offer you something you value as much as your family's safety—value for your family's money.

Nostalgia may be all Democrats have left

NEW YORK — In the basement of The Other End, a bistro in Greenwich Village where the folkies used to roam, Mary Travers wails out her sad song from beneath her rock-sided bangs.

The Democratic Party delegates sit in earnest concentration, their faces uplifted in the gloom, as if seeking solutions to their problems.

This is nostaliga night, since Mary Travers was once rather better known as the girl in Peter, Paul and Mary — one of the classic successes of the folk singer era when college kids gathered to protest and songs were plaintive bleats against all authority.

Now middle-aged, but still wearing their protest jeans, the well-scrubbed Democrats from across the land chase past memories as they listen to Mary Travers in her sad little attempt to recapture a period that is long gone.

The party of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, meeting in his New York for the second straight time, seems not to have much to look forward to: Every poll indicates that Ronny Reagan (with his "Max Factor facism," as one local columnist bitterly decribes him) is far ahead of the bumbling Carter family.

The White House, inhabited by "Jimmy and Evita" is not seen as the home of leadership.

Even while Teddy Kennedy's desperate fight over convention rules was going on Monday night, a block away from Madison Square Garden, street vendors were selling Teddy Kennedy for Lifeguard buttons. It's a swell little party they've got here.

It was six years ago this weekend that Richard (I-am-not-a-crook) Nixon was forced to abdicate when even he couldn't keep up with his own lies. It seemed the Democrats would be home-free for years to come.

Now the party is split in two, not respecting Carter, but stuck with him.

Such is the crisis at the top that the party which has traditionally relied on the energy and drive of committed college kids seems about to go down to defeat to a 69-year-old rival.

It's not very inspiring.

What worries the poor Democrats as Carter flips and flops about in search of a policy, is that he may drag them down with him.

Presidents come and go, but Democratic control of Congress is what is important in a country where patronage rules government jobs down to minor judges and sheriffs.

The party still holds 59 of the 100 Senate seats and 274 of the 435 seats in the House of Representatives, but there's the fear that so many of them could go sliding along with Carter's unpopularity that those red-necked Reaganites could gain control of Washington as well as the White House.

It's why so many Congressmen are staying away from this convention — detecting that they can only be splattered in the blood-letting.

So we have a party stuck with a presidential candidate it doesn't really want but can't reject at this late hour, in a city that doesn't really see why its chaotic traffic should be diverted by the massive security arrangements around Madison Square Garden, covered by a mob of journalists who are furious with the Democrats for the fouled-up arrangements in the August heat.

The highlight of the whole convetion may come when the national anthem is sung Wednesday night by Willy Nelson, the country and western whisky tenor who ranks about as high now in the music business as Peter, Paul and Mary did 20 years ago.

He is lined and worn and rather scruffy and unkempt — just about the way the Democratic Party appears as it opens this convention.

Cold dunk a lifesaver in tumble?

COQUITLAM (CP) — Rescue officials say a dunking in a cold mountain stream probably saved the life of a seriously-injured man who had fallen 30 metres down a rock slide area of Eagle Mountain near Buntzen Lake.

Thirty men and three helicopters were marshalled over a 5½-hour period to bring Howard Heyden, 20, of New Westminster, to safety. He was in serious condition Monday in hospital.

Don Cunnings, Coquitlam emergency program director, said Heyden apparently got the break of his life when he came to rest in the cold stream after his fall.

He said Heyden was immersed in the water for several hours and the low body heat condition helped by letting his blood congeal and slowing his heart beat.

B.C. Rail's losses show slight drop

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Railway reports a net loss of more than $21.2 million during the first six months of this year, compared with a net loss of $26.6 million during the first six months of 1979.

The provincially-owned railway recorded an operating profit of more than $6 million in the six-month period ended June 30, compared with $702,000 in the same period last year.

Interest on its long-term debt in the latest period totalled more than $28.8 million, compared with $28.2 million during the first six months of 1979.

Bennett suing Stupich for newsletter comments

Premier Bill Bennett launched a libel action Monday against Dave Stupich over comments the Nanaimo NDP MLA made in a newsletter published July 30.

The newsletter — entitled Report from the Legislature — was mailed to Stupich's constituents and to three area newspapers.

Bennett's action, filed in B.C. Supreme Court, seeks general and punitive damages on the grounds the newsletter's allegations have seriously injured his character and have brought his reputation into public disapproval.

Stupich said he intends to ask fellow NDP MLA and former attorney-general Alex Macdonald to represent him in the action.

It was Macdonald who originally checked out the text of Stupich's newsletter and permitted it to be issued uncensored and unabridged.

Following the release of that July 30 newsletter, it appeared Stupich would escape with only an apology.

Stupich's Aug. 6 newsletter consisted of his reply to Butler and included an apology which apparently did not satisfy the lawyer.

In it, Stupich pointed out that Bennett apologized in the legislature for his "scotch and cornflakes" remark and said he was prepared to do the same for his own comments.

"I regret that the premier chose to use a legal firm to ask for an apology rather than follow the time-honored method of asking for such an apology in the house," he wrote.

Stupich offered his apologies to anyone who might be offended by his July 30 newsletter, including the premier.

An amusing and embarrassing sidelight to the situation is that Butler's letter stated: "We act for William A. C. Bennett" and suggested that Stupich had committed a very serious libel against William A. C. Bennett.

In his open letter of apology, Stupich says to Butler:

"I think it is safe to asume that your client is actually William R. Bennett, Premier of B.C."

Just in case there is any doubt, he adds: "Let me make it absolutely clear that I intended no reflection upon the habits or character of our former premier, W. A. C. Bennett, deceased."

W.A.C., Stupich noted, was a teetotaler.

Alaska-bound skater stranded in interior

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — A one-armed Californian who says he's roller skating to Alaska for charity has had his journey temporarily halted in this Peace River community.

Lyle Telford, a 31-year-old former disc jockey, set out from Hayward, Calif., July 2 hoping to reach Homer, Alaska, by the end of September.

However, when Telford arrived here last week, the woman who had been driving his car decided to leave the project and the skater says he needs another driver before he can continue his 6,000-kilometre roller journey.

Telford says he began the trek to raise money for St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Telford is using skates equipped with extra-large skateboard wheels which make it easier to ride over rocky roads.

When the road becomes very rough, Telford said he planned to be pulled by his two sled dogs.

The new voting class

The Social Credit government cannot be serious about its proposed amendments to the Municipal Act. They will shock even the business community, the group affected by the amendments.

The proposal would allow business people who rent office or plant space in a municipality to vote in the same municipality, regardless of where they live. The same businessman could also cast a ballot in the municipality where he resides. In essence, he could vote twice.

This would extend provisions reintroduced by the Social Credit in 1976 that gave voting rights to owners of land who were not residents of the municipality. People who owned land in Victoria, for instance, but resided in Prince George were given the opportunity to vote in Victoria.

The only saving grace to the 1976 amendment was that it did not affect a large number of people. However, allowing people to vote on the basis of where they rent office or plant space will likely add thousands of names to the voters lists in Vancouver and Victoria, both of which are ringed by bedroom municipalities.

Perhaps the proposal will focus public attention on some of the basic principles on which our democratic society is built. Federal and provincial elections are held on the basis of one person, one vote. They are based on the idea that a person's eligibilty to vote is not affected by his social position, wealth or business interests. Those are good principles.

Some members of the provincial government obviously think those principles need not apply to municipal elections. In 1976, the government created a special class of voters based on land ownership. It is now proposing to broaden that class based on a businessperson's tenancy. Nothing is more foreign than singling out certain sectors of the population for dual voting privileges.

The rational for such a move must be based on a belief that business people who do not work and live in the same municipality are being shortchanged at the ballot box. The simple solution is for them to live in the municipality where they work.

Fightin' words, Dr. Gallup

Grace McCarthy, B.C.'s deputy premier and human resources minister, put her celebrated finger neatly on the button this week when she said that she disbelieves a Gallup Poll claiming 45 per cent of British Columbians are opposed to retaining Queen Elizabeth as head of state. The poll is as incredible as an earlier one conducted by a Vancouver firm, purporting to show that 72 per cent of Vancouver Island and lower mainland residents favor a fixed link between the island and the mainland.

The B.C. figures are reportedly close to the national average, which shows a mere 47 per cent of Canadians support Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional reform proposal to retain the monarch as head of state, while 43 per cent are opposed.

Sorry and all that, Dr. Gallup, but we just don't believe it, especially when we're told that the conclusion is reached on the basis of personal interviews with 1,057 Canadians — presumably plucked at random from the telephone book.

The difficulty in arguing with pollsters, of course, is that they have the figures. One has to lean on such nebulous things as visual evidence — the extraordinary crowds of Canadians who turn out to cheer the monarch whenever she visits this country — and the almost total absence of any public demand for the removal of the Queen as Canada's official head of state.

The poll's findings on Quebecers' aversion to the monarchy come as no surprise. To most francophones the institution is an odious symbol, an unpleasant reminder of English conquest and domination.

But until a national plebiscite is held to settle this question once and for all, we'll trust Grace's instinctive digital computer.

Accepting the unthinkable?

NEW YORK — To hear the Republicans tell it at their Detroit convention, the United States under Jimmy Carter has so neglected its military defences as to make the nation No. 2 to the steadily growing power of the Soviet Union. Baloney.

Now the Carter administration seeks to counter that argument, at least partially, by leaking word of a "new strategy" that would make possible "prolonged but limited" nuclear war involving only Soviet and American military targets. More baloney.

But on both sides, this baloney is too dangerously rancid to accept. It smells of a new arms race, the end of SALT, vast expenditures for more overkill; and it reeks with the threat of a nuclear war suddenly being seen by Strangelovian theorists as "thinkable" and even "winnable."

Focus needed

More power, therefore, to the dissident Democrats who will push for adoption of a minority platform report opposing "accelerated development" of the MX movable missile. The dissidents — not all Kennedy supporters — probably can't win, since Carter thinks he needs to "hang tough" against Reagan; but the debate might at least focus needed public attention on this overblown boondoggle, and nuclear strategy itself.

Another purpose of Carter's "new strategy," in fact, may well be to provide a more plausible rationale for the MX — which, at an estimated cost of $34 billion, is hard to justify even if it doesn't turn out to be two or three times that expensive. The official government leaks described the limited-war strategy as requiring larger, more sophisticated and more accurate weapons — just like, of course, the MX.

The fallacious notion of the United States as No. 2 is based on a big Soviet arms buildup in recent years, to the point where in the mid-80s bigger and more accurate Soviet missiles will threaten the American land-based missile force. But this leaves out of account the fact that even if a surprise attack destroyed those ICBM's the United States could retaliate with 3,000 submarine-based warheads (5,000 after the new Tridents are at sea) and 800 warheads in the alert bomber force — not to mention the cruise missiles now being readied.

But, the new strategists say, an American president might hesitate to retaliate on Soviet cities merely for the loss of his missile force. That seems highly unlikely; and it's even more unlikely that a Soviet leader would launch a "limited" attack on roughly 25 per cent of U.S. warheads, knowing that the United States could and probably would retaliate by obliterating approximately 220 Soviet cities and 113 million Soviet citizens.

And anyway, numerous American warheads are already aimed at Soviet military targets. Trident missiles, for example, will have about the same accuracy as is planned for the MX and are highly suitable for precise targeting. As for a nuclear buildup, the United States has hardly been standing still; in January, 1970, according to the Center for Defense Information, it had 4,000 strategic nuclear weapons, enough to destroy the Soviet Union and China. In June, 1980, it had 10,000. By 1990, under present plans, including warheads to be placed in allied countries, it could cause 19,000 nuclear explosions in the Soviet Union.

What is the justification, therefore, for the new limited-war strategy? Primarily, the unnamed leaks said, because the Soviets appear to be moving toward such a strategy, and must be matched. If they put a higher value on military installations than on their own cities, they can only be deterred from war by a threat to the military installations.

But this supposed Soviet view is not an indisputable fact; numerous Western analysts do not accept it. And particularly as the Trident and cruise missiles become available — before the MX could possibly be built — American missiles will be aimed at Soviet military installations anyway.

The worst aspect of the "new strategy," however, is that it would tend to make nuclear war more nearly acceptable — hence more likely. If leaders come to believe, and the public accepts, the idea that a nuclear war can be "limited" to military targets only, and that such a war can even be won, nuclear war becomes no longer "unthinkable"; and the object of national policy no longer will be to avoid such a war but to win it when it comes.

Increased odds

That being the case, any president or Soviet leader in some future crisis is more likely to order a nuclear strike — for "limited" purposes — than has been the case while the obliteration of the human race — whole nations, at least — was thought to be the certain consequence of a nuclear exchange.

But even many who favor the "new strategy" do not really believe nuclear war can be "limited"; nor does any general or admiral worth his stars. And whatever the Soviet threat may be, planning to counter it with a tidy little nuclear war, "prolonged but limited," is a lethal delusion that an ex-naval officer ought not to encourage even for campaign purposes.

CAROL GOAR

An apologizing salesman

OTTAWA — It may be heartwarming to be treated as a trusted friend by the world's poor and developing nations, but it would make Ed Lumley far happier if they realized their good buddy also builds fine railroads and designs great dams.

The 40-year-old trade minister has been around the world three times since he joined Pierre Trudeau's cabinet in March. Home briefly this week to recharge his batteries and spend a few days with his almost neglected family, he spoke to FP News Service about his first five months as a minister.

"It has convinced me that Canada has a good name throughout the world, but in terms of international business we are not perceived as a leader.

U.S. factor

"Countries are always surprised when I tell them we can be internationally competitive. When they go looking for industrial assistance in North America, they never see beyond the United States."

Lumley blames the problem partly on economics and partly on the way Canadians see themselves. For years, Canadian businessman could afford to be half-hearted in their foreign ventures because the economy at home was growing so quickly. It was all they could do to satisfy the domestic market. Meanwhile, however, the Japanese, Germans, French and Americans were becoming extremely skilful international salesman.

The 1980's dawned and Canada's economy, like those of most industrial nations, slowed to a crawl. But the country had neither the contacts nor the confidence to charge boldly into the international big league.

"Part of the problem is our own inferiority complex in international business," Lumley said. "We're always in the shadow of the greatest industrial giant in the world."

"One of my biggest jobs is to get our own businessmen to be aggressive."

He learned just how difficult this task could be a few months ago on a major trade mission in Indonesia. After several intense bargaining sessions, Lumley says he almost had the Indonesian authorities convinced that a Canadian consortium was their best candidate to design and manage the mammoth $1.5 billion coal mining development the country is planning. The project would involve supplying hundreds of engineers, mining equipment, railroads, locomotives, generators and building materials. Canadian trade officials had been working on the deal for more than two years.

At the last minute one of the key Canadian companies in the package came to Lumley and said it was backing out. It had just snared a couple of major contracts and didn't think it could handle the extra business. The minister was furious. Not only was the firm turning up its nose at a multi-million dollar contract, it was also jeopardizing the whole Canadian bid and possibly closing the door on further contracts down the road.

"We had to use moral suasion," the trade minister said with a self-satisfied smile. He refused to elaborate. He remains convinced that Canada is sitting pretty for the Indonesian project.

ED LUMLEY
. . . promoting industry

When he visits a country, Lumley says he likes to lay the groundwork for one major industrial project as his minimum objective. So far, he has visited Malaysia, Indonesia, Mexico, Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, Japan, and has paid the mandatory courtesy calls to Reuben Askew, his counterpart in the United States. He was busy this week sorting through nine recommended trips from his officials for the first week of September.

"Sometimes I think my biggest problem is deciding where to go next."

He hasn't been to South America yet and sees a major trade opportunity to explore there. He wants to get back to the Far East, particularly Thailand and mainland China, before the government's Pacific Rim trade conference in Vancouver next November. And he has promised to go to central Europe soon.

He's spent about half his time on the road so far, logging more miles than any of his cabinet colleaques. Until the position of Minister of International Trade was created by Joe Clark's Conservative government a year ago, the industry minister — preoccupied with domestic problems — made one or two international trips a year. His department always selected an area in which Canada had already made major inroads to insure that the mission would yield visible gains.

Lumley has changed the rules. He has told his officials not to bother sending him to see Canada's success stories. "I want to go where I can really open doors, even if there is a risk I won't make concrete gains."

Gregarious, hard working and handsome, the trade minister is welcomed everywhere. But he is soon peppered with questions: How can Canada expect other nations to open their doors when this country's own leaders keep talking about beefing up Canada's restrictions on foreign investments? Why does Canada erect such high tariff walls to keep up prices for its textiles and manufactured goods? Why can't such a rich country provide more foreign aid?

Lumley ducks, explaining that these questions aren't really within the jurisdiction of a junior minister with five months cabinet experience.

Image maker

But sometimes he hams it up a bit. After all he's the only Canadian politician most of his listeners will ever meet. He's the one who has to leave the impression that Canada is decisive and forward looking. And trade stories from foreign capitals rarely find their way back home anyway.

So Lumley plays ambassador and spokesman, salesman and diplomat, apologist and boaster all rolled up in one.

He says he's enjoying the hectic days tremendously. The business community is applauding. The reports he's getting from abroad are encouraging. He hasn't had any reaction from Prime Minister Trudeau yet, but that doesn't concern him.

"One thing you always know about Trudeau — if you're not doing what you're supposed to, he'll let you know about it.

"So I guess I am."

Central control

We have central government in Canada. We do not have true federal government. The central government we have is controlled by two provinces, Ontario and Quebec.

I am in favor of a strong federal government; but I believe that the other eight provinces should resist all moves to place more power in the present form of central government.

The control of resources and of the constitution must be kept away from central government control until the federal government becomes responsible to all parts of Canada.

I have lived in six provinces and travelled extensively in the rest. Most people that I have talked to agree that the top priority is to find a way to form a true federal government, with all parts of Canada receiving proper representation and consideration. — A. T. McCormick 304-2920 Cook Street.

Vibrant leadership

Fierce minority resistance to city hall, albeit it in the name of the whole community, over specific developments has always been common. The controversies have not always been earth shattering, yet open warfare has seemingly been declared on city council.

There now seems to be a more bitter tone prevailing that tends to drive aldermen and responsible citizens up the wall as never before. There is no doubt that it arises from the involvement of certain community "activist" associations in partisan politics. It follows that here in Victoria, the momentum to create an opposition to everything, in this case to the new Conference and Trade Centre, came from very small local groups and local politicians who appeared pressured by vocal minorities among their constituents.

Every tactic has been used including attacks on the integrity of Mayor Tindall and some aldermen, abusive telephone calls, printed propaganda and personal insults.

Why and where do they come from?

It is my impression the seeds were sown when community groups were encouraged to provide input. Too quickly they began to usurp the function of professional planners at city hall and became dominated by a few ambitious professional objectors.

It is a gross miscarriage of elected responsibility when an official bows to every pressure like reeds in the wind. Victoria council deserves every applause in that it stood firm and strong to encourage the construction of our new conference centre. They realized fully that the noisy ginger group did not represent anyone excepting themselves.

Aldermen cannot please all the people. They do have the power and responsibility to bite the bullet from time to time. Hopefully all incumbents and aspirants to public office will not be motivated by popularity alone because in that event, they cannot despatch their duties dutifully.

To Victoria city council, many thanks for your display of vibrant leadership. — Dr. A. H. Lane, 308-1830 Oak Bay Avenue.

Time for treatment

A person just has to take a walk along the beaches of southern Vancouver Island, especially during low tide, to appreciate the growing concern by clear-thinking people who are saying it is high time that sewage treatment plants are built as quickly as possible, not 20 or more years down the drain from now.

Other than having citizens whose bodies can excrete pure, harmless waste, sewage treatment plants are at present, and probably for a long time, by far the best solution for effectively nullifying the human pollution which is constantly flowing into our oceans, lakes and rivers.

Sewage treatment plants do not come cheaply, but neither does good health and a clean, desirable quality of life. So far, southern Vancouver Island is a very attractive place to live and visit; however, the ever-expanding population is indicating the necessity of sewage treatment plants so the waters and shores will never become nauseating, unhealthy segments of the environment. — J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Poor semantics

With reference to a recently published letter from M. Neve, I too must protest the Times' use of the adjective "awkward" in describing Terry Fox's run across Canada. While the word "awkward" fairly describes Terry's gait, its use by the press lends a negative connotation to the individual. I realize that this is a matter of semantics, but with a little care the press could avoid such derogatory labelling of the handicapped.

Further, I take issue with your reference to Terry as a one-legged man. As you will note from pictures of Terry, he is running on two legs; one happens to be prosthetic. In fact, many amputees have three and four legs in addition to a biological leg. They merely choose which leg/prosthesis they want to wear according to their planned activity. I have a friend who has a prosthesis he wears expressly for golfing! — S. A. Jinks, 1670 Fort Street.

Third World 'aid' props up evil system

By RICHARD GOTT
Manchester Guardian

The British government's decision to reject the Brandt Report should be warmly welcomed. Someone from a position of authority and influence had to put the boot in sooner or later. Unctuous and high-minded, embodying the usual neo-colonialist aspirations of the aid lobby and the development mafia, the report was already beginning to assume a venerated status of the kind customarily reserved for tablets in stone.

Enlightened people in the First World, who ought to have known better, fell for its progressive verbiage, ignoring the obvious fact that it was peddling the same old developmentalist nostrums that have characterized discussions about the world economy for the last two decades. Now, at least, a forthright statement from the British Foreign Office, reiterating the colonial (rather than the neo-colonial) arguments that continue to flower in the West (and where Mrs. Thatcher leads can Ronald Reagan be far behind?), may serve to stop the Brandt bandwagon dead in its tracks.

For the Brandt Report is not a dispassionate analysis of the international economic system, it is a propaganda weapon devised by Robert McNamara of the Vietnam war and the World Bank to appeal to the peoples of the North over the heads of their governments, to enlist their support in propping up an unequal and evil system that deserves to be not reformed but destroyed.

Brandt and Co. know that the present international system is in crisis, they recognize the urgency of reform, and they perceive correctly that the elites in the North and South have "a mutuality of interest" in promoting that reform. They are endorsing a message that has been klaxoning out from UNCTAD conferences for more than a decade.

It is not a message that has ever been shared by the British Foreign Office. As McNamara rightly saw before he set up the Brandt Commission, Western governments were short-sightedly ignoring the crisis in the international system.

BRANDT
. . . report assailed

The British government, says last week's Foreign Office statement, "does not believe that protectionism is as widespread as the Brandt Report suggests." It does not believe "that there is a single sharp division" between North and South. It is happy to ignore the warning signals issued by Brandt, preferring to rely on private investment, market forces and trans-national corporations.

Predictably the development enthusiasts in the British press have attacked the Foreign Office document. Yet what these ardent developers refuse to admit, or even discuss, is the fact that most people in the world are adversely affected by the present international economic system, reformed or not.

The "many hundreds of millions of people in the poorer countries" described by Brandt, who are "preoccupied solely with survival and elementary needs" are kept in conditions of degradation — and often with insufficient food — by the operations of the system. Their interest must lie in its breakdown and the collapse of the support that it offers to the unrepresentative elites of the South.

For the very existence of the system strengthens those local elites, frustrates indigenous development, and hinders the overthrow of barbaric and anti-popular regimes. It both promotes and perpetuates the misery and deprivation in which so much of the world's population now lives. The last thing that those who suffer under it need is for its existence to be prolonged through reform.

The changes envisaged by Brandt, far from constructing a plan for the survival of mankind, would erect some new and monstrous world tyranny — just at the moment when there are signs all over the Third World that peoples and nations are beginning to envisage breaking loose from the existing one. Never before has the system been so questioned. The mindless pursuit of international trade, the soulless promotion of industrialization, the persistent destruction of local agriculture, is at last being held up to criticism and ridicule.

A growing body of opinion sees that true development can only occur when individual countries detach (or "uncouple") themselves from the prevailing economic system and organize on autonomous, autarkic lines, capable at the very least of feeding themselves.

This, of course, is not the position of the British government in its criticism of Brandt. The British government "believes strongly in the merits of the present world economic system." It is powerfully opposed to individual countries creating the capacity to feed themselves ("a policy of national autarky in food production for each developing country would not make sense"). But, by so boldly criticizing Brandt, the British government has at least broken the consensus illustrating the huge disagreements that exist within the First World elite about the nature and desirability of the existing world system. Its own proposals are, of course, antediluvian, harking back to the certainties of the colonial era. Yet by attacking the brazen image of Brandt, it will have performed a useful service.

Labor's squabbling helps Tories

CALLAGHAN . . . a warning

JENKINS . . . new party?

By R. W. APPLE, Jr.
New York Times

LONDON — In the best of times, Britain's Labor Party is an uneasy alliance of trade unions, all-out socialists and social democrats. These are not the best of times. The party is deeply split on organizational and ideological questions, split so deeply that some politicians wonder whether unity can be restored in time for the next general election, which is scheduled for 1984.

The squabbling matters because it is preventing Labor from providing a coherent voice of opposition at a time when the government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is vulnerable. Her Conservative Party trails by only three percentage points in the opinion polls, even though unemployment last week reached a postwar record of almost 1.9 million. One central reason for this anomaly is that Labor has been unable to put across an alternative program.

Last month, there were two prime examples of the mess the party has got itself into. First, the resolutions submitted for the annual Blackpool party conference in October showed overwhelming support for withdrawal from the European Community, for unilateral nuclear disarmament and for renationalization without compensation of businesses returned to private ownership by the Conservatives. The Parliamentary Party, composed of the Labor members of Parliament, and the shadow cabinet of senior MPs who would lead a new Labor government, strongly oppose all three positions.

On disarmament, the resolutions would commit the party to oppose the basing of American cruise missiles in Britain and would cancel Britain's commitment to buy Trident missiles. Then, the party's left-dominated National Executive Committee voted to give official labor support to a Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament march in London on Oct. 26. Former Prime Minister James Callaghan, the party leader, a member of the committee, took the extraordinary step of dissociating himself, warning of "serious consequences" if the party followed a unilateral course.

The ideological warfare is reminiscent of the battles of the 1960s, complicated by a struggle over organizational questions which will also come to a head at Blackpool. Three issues will be decided; in each, the left is proposing radical change and the right is defending the status quo.

The reformers want to (a) give the national executive the sole right to frame the election manifesto, stripping the party leader of his veto (b) give local party members a voice in the selection of the leader, who is now elected by the MPs and (c) institute mandatory reselection of MPs. (Now, an MP, once elected, is almost automatically renominated for every general election. Under reselection, he would apply for renomination to his local party, giving it the ability to influence his voting in the Commons, because it could dump him.)

All three reforms would increase the power of the left wing. But there are relatively few activists and their votes are not enough to win a general election. To do that, Labor must attract the support of rank-and-file voters, who tend to be more conservative. That is the rub: Those are precisely the voters who tend to be repelled by many left-wing proposals.

One prominent Labor politician has already decided that the party is doomed. He is Roy Jenkins, once a senior cabinet minister, and president of the European Commission in Brussels until January. He is preparing to launch a new centre party, hoping to attract disillusioned Labor right-wingers and perhaps some Tory left-wingers who have found Thatcher's harsh economic policies hard to swallow. Jenkins has won no big-name recruits, but a debacle at Blackpool, he hopes, will persuade important Labor figures to join his risky venture.

The unquestioned leader of the left is Tony Benn, who renounced his peerage to continue in the House of Commons and quit the shadow cabinet to contest its views. An intense socialist intellectual, he believes the only feasible alternative to Thatcherite economics is heavy government intervention, including nationalization. Benn's backers include relatively few members of Parliament but most of the grass-roots party workers and some union officials.

All the fighting in the executive committee and other forums will be repeated at the party conference, which makes final decisions on party policy. There, the decisive voices will be those of the handful of huge trade unions whose "bloc votes" for their millions of members constitute an unchallengeable majority. Because of this system, which has been criticized for years, two men will count for more at the conference than Callaghan or anyone else. They are Moss Evans, the leader of the Transport and General Workers Union, and Terry Duffy, the leader of the engineers. Their organizations account for about 40 per cent of the votes at the conference. Evans is a man of the left, but not an extremist; Duffy is a right-winger. The engineers' boss is expected to side with Callaghan, although that is by no means certain, Evans' intentions are unclear. And there is yet another ideological complication — the argument over incomes policy.

Callaghan and Healey favor some sort of plan for controlling wages and prices, just as they did when they were in office. But the trade unions, including the transport workers and the engineers, detest Callaghan's incomes policy. They also oppose Thatcher's monetary approach, of course, but they have put forward no scheme of their own for dealing with Britain's endemic inflation.

How much for 'official culture'?

By DICK DABNEY
Washington Post

Back in the '50s, when it was suggested to President Eisenhower that Russia had us at a disadvantage because it had an official philosophy and we did not, he showed a sympathetic appreciation of the difficulties involved and suggested, "Look here — why don't we have a writer, or somebody, to draw one up?"

Those of course, were penny-ante days compared with these, for in recent years the lament has been not for any mere philosophy, but for a whole "culture", which we are now paying for people to "draw up" to the tune of $600 million a year. That, it is projected, will be the annual sum of money to be spent on the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities 'ere this decade's half up. Then, too, there will be at least that much more in challenge grants and matching grants from the big corporations. They profess to love culture just as much as the government does — which is to say, as much as the wolf loved Little Red Riding Hood — and their representatives can be seen on almost any given week sitting elbow to elbow with equally enthusiastic legislators and high administration commissars of beauty and truth, over the good silver and crystal, and in the fragrant proximity of whole baskets full of white tulips and violets, while partaking of sherry, cold artichokes, marinated beef, zucchini and poached pears — all for the sake of culture.

In a way, their instincts are sound, because American culture, aside from the movies, does seem to be in a bad way, with the arts having produced no composer, no painter, no poet, no sculptor and, at most, one writer of real distinction since 1945, and with the humanities being dominated from top to bottom by corporate academicians of narrow specialties, whose true interest in their own subjects — other than as means by which to rise — is minimal.

And so big government, always ready with a remedy, has given us the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities, whose doings are trenchantly chronicled by Michael Mooney in Harper's. The rationale, of course, is that it is not going to be like Russia, where there's an official ideology and everybody is obliged to write, paint, sculpt or research the party line. Ah no, not here — where everybody is going to be Free, to live up to the aesthetic standards of the government, and where the prime purpose, besides that of Enriching Our Country, will be to help The Artist, who has a tough row to hoe because he is chronically broke.

Unfortunately, the toughest row for any artist to hoe, it seems to me, is that of having no talent, and the second toughest is having no soul, and the third is having no self-discipline. It is sometimes difficult to see just what the federal government and corporate America can do about that.

This brings us to the fourth toughest row to hoe — namely, any artist's or scholar's sure knowledge that the arts and humanities, like most other sectors of our society, are controlled by smooth, manipulative middlemen. The way the government proposes to help them with that is by laying on more middlemen. These, we are told, will give out the honors in American culture. This is curious. Now, to give out cabbage, you must first have cabbage. With honor, however, it may be a different case — and when you get down to it, any culture commissar who succeeds in finding an artist out there has performed an exceedingly meritorious act. What usually obtains, when you turn over a rock in search of a serious artist, is that an entrepreneur with a paint brush or typewriter crawls out, zigzagging like a roach in his nervous hunt for the next stipend, and scanning the horizon for that blessed day when he can at last cool it with the "artist" dodge and become a middleman, too, gravely lunching with others of his kind, or taking dollars extorted by the IRS from a hapless welder in Akron and giving them to some sunbather who wants to write free verse on the flight of gulls and who would hate the welder if he met him, and for whom the only truly obscene four-letter word is "work".

MONDALE . . . 'mother'

I speak out of no large innocence, for I was broke a few years ago, filled out a little form the NEA had, and got $5,000 back in the mail to help me finish a novel. Moreover, they were gentle people down there, the money helped over some exceedingly difficult times, and there were no strings attached. If you had said anything to them about an official party line, they would have been shocked and rightfully so, because there was none.

As for an unofficial party line, however, it was another matter, because those on the selection board were, of course, in the American literature business, which has been dominated by a single idea for the past 60 years: that a work of fiction is not to be considered serious unless the protagonist is a person who, overwhelmed by the brutal and confusing aspects of American life, abandons reason, self-control and political action in favor of gratuitous violence, verbose sniveling and obsessive sex. This bothers me, not only because it became outworn and boring 25 years ago, but because it canonizes as "sensitive" just the sort of supine behavior an oppressive government would want of its artists and scholars, and of its citizens generally. Moreover, similar canons reign in the other arts. And thus if it is nice for the official culture to be mothered by Mrs. Mondale, one wonders whether it isn't a little too nice, and whether it is worth any $600 million a year.

SNC Group

The SNC Group has reported an increase in sales of professional services for the second quarter of the year, with sales rising to $27,679,000 compared with $20,370,000 for the same period the year before.

But net earnings were down to $403,000 or 13 cents a share compared with $876,000 or 28 cents a share for the same period last year.

The company said Thursday that the increase in sales came mainly from what it described as "the low-profitability construction market."

Sales rose to $2 billion from $1.7 billion.

The figures reflect the merger of Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. and Consumer Gas Co. Ltd. earlier this year and the takeover at the beginning of this year of Home Oil Co. by Consumers just prior to the merger.

Global

Global Communications Ltd. had a net loss before extraordinary items of $4.57 million in the nine months ended May 31, compared with a loss of $439,000 in the similar period a year ago.

The company reported extraordinary items through income tax recovery of $2.62 million in the present fiscal year and $1.97 million last year, reducing the net loss this year to $1.94 million while the three quarters last year showed a profit of $1.53 million.

Revenue for the period rose slightly to $41.7 million from $41 million a year ago.

Access land seizure eyed

Land for a 15-foot-wide public access on the east side of Prospect Lake should be expropriated if necessary, Saanich council's standing committee decided Monday.

The committee will recommend council obtain a 1,400-foot-long corridor widening to 30 feet of lakefront from a property being purchased by Robert Dorken.

Dorken agrees to the corridor, but is offering only 15 feet of waterfront. He wants the municipality to promise not to take any more land.

When a waterfront property is subdivided or sold the municipality is legally entitled to 66 feet of beach access every 666 feet.

Municipal solicitor Chris Nation said in a report a 15-foot wide strip to the water would provide only bare access and wouldn't justify the expense of building the rest of the trail.

Nation questioned whether the money saved by avoiding expropriation — an estimated $20,000 — is fair compensation for the reduced amount of waterfront.

He said Saanich cannot legally promise Dorken it will not expropriate any more of his property.

Ald. Mary Casilio said the Dorken property provided the only opportunity to acquire access to the east side of the lake.

But waterfront residents at the meeting criticized council's move to gain access, saying a public route would be unsafe and create a fire hazard and vandalism problems.

Council decided to take action after a group of residents demanded a formal inquiry into Saanich's failure to provide an access on that side of the lake.

Mayor Mel Couvelier told residents last October an inquiry wouldn't be necessary.

He blamed the lack of access along a 4,500-foot strip of waterfront on a communications breakdown between aldermen and staff and said steps would be taken to correct the problem.

Staff said the terrain was too steep and rough to provide suitable access.

Ald. John Mika said Monday a comedy of errors deprived the public of its right to access to the lake and told waterfront property owners he wasn't impressed with their objections.

"We have future generations to think about," he said.

Finnerty outfall options kept open

Saanich won't comment on the fate of the controversial Finnerty Cove outfall until after a Sept. 3 Capital Region District meeting.

A standing committee of council decided Monday the municipality should wait until the CRD, which has jurisdiction over outfalls, has studied the alternatives.

The outfall, constructed in 1962 to last 10 years, discharges 1.5 million gallons of raw sewage daily and has been operating without a permit for a year.

A policy requiring that coliform counts at shoreline meet shellfish and swimming standards was established recently by the regional health committee.

The regional district's solid waste management and sewage committee will look at two options — installing a sewage treatment plant or extending the existing outfall.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren says in a report extending the outfall will cost $1.8 million. He estimates the cost of constructing a treatment plant at more than $3.5 million.

Council should be involved in any discussion the CRD has about upgrading the outfall, because the operation is funded entirely by the municipality, Warren said.

In other business, council approved an offer by the owners of Royal Oak Inn to pay $136,000 toward the cost of off-site improvements for an addition of 106 self-contained units.

The owners, the Isherwood family, and Saanich have already entered into an agreement for the extension of sewers.

The engineer said the agreement will include other services such as road widening, curb and gutters and sidewalks fronting the hotel.

Council also defeated in a 4-4 tie vote a rezoning application for a 108-seat restaurant at Cordova Bay, site of the old Schoor's restaurant.

CLUES ACROSS

3. SPURT not sport. The clue's specifying "really fine" has more point for SPURT, since all sports are good to watch. It is rather that spectators like to see any sport well contested.
7. BOOED not bored. The extremeness of the clue's phrase "absolute loathing" suits BOOED better, since to bore a man is unintentional and not a positive affront.
9. WAGER not water. One readily imagines cases in which one may feel like having a little bet or WAGER. Water is a less natural answer since it's simply a question of being thirsty, or feeling like a drink (rather than "a little water," specifically).
10. FISH not wish. A man can always adopt a hobby (e.g., FISHing) without being limited to wishing for one.
15. RAM not rat. One can possibly have trouble with a RAM; but it is that rats are an acknowledged pest, rather than that a rat is a possible source of trouble.
20. WAY not war. It is the WAY, rather, that may be long and wearisome. War is tragic and disastrous, rather than merely tedious.
25. POINTER not painter. "Can play a certain part" is an understatement for the painter, who may actually teach pupils. "POINTER" (teacher's rod used for indicating) is more directly apt.
26. PAY not pry. The clue's air of justifying reluctance to PAY/pry "in certain circumstances" favor PAY, since one doesn't wish to pry in any case, and shouldn't do so anyway.

CLUES DOWN

1. POSTER not roster. The idea of there being a choice of sizes of "lettering" favors POSTER, since a roster may well be simply written or typed just so it is easy to read.
5. TAXING not taking. The state is understood to tax "income"; but only part of it is so taken, and it is, in any case, a question of tax.
6. MOTHER not bother. "Spring" is a good indication that the clue refers to MOTHERS and their newborn babies.
12. TASKS not tanks. Since even a few light tanks can be quite overwhelming, the clue's specifying "large numbers of heavy ones" has more point for TASKS.
13. SLOW not slob. SLOW is nicely opposed to the clue's "quick" idea. Also, "slob" is a term of insult more than anything else.
14. BUST not bush. As the clue hints, a sculpted BUST may add a certain distinction to a garden. A bush is merely ordinary.
16. SCRAPE not scraps. Having others on your side in scraps is more actively helpful than merely a "consolation" — which, anyway, is something you want when contemplating the trouble your're in (SCRAPE).
18. LATEST not latent. Since latent prospects are hardly evident, LATEST is the more reasonable answer.
21. POTS not lots. POTS, certainly, even if there isn't room for lots.

Horse racing gets tax break

Amendments to the Horse Racing Tax Act which will increase funds available to assist the horse breeding and horse racing industries in B.C. were introduced Monday by Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

The new legislation provides that one-half of the revenues obtained from the seven-per-cent parimutuel tax be set aside for purse supplements, breeders' assistance and other grants.

Previously, one per cent of the parimutuel tax had gone to the B.C. Bred Purse Supplement Fund and half of one per cent to the Breeders' Incentive Fund.

Society investigating lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Law Society of B.C. is investigating the professional conduct of Vancouver lawyer John Russell Taylor who was recently found guilty in B.C. Supreme Court of gross breach of duty and ordered to pay $30,000 damages to two female clients.

Mr. Justice J.G. Gould said Friday that Taylor acted as solicitor for Marilyn Murphy and Christine McGhee when they bought a duplex at Whistler Mountain with the idea of turning it into a bed-and-breakfast ski hostel. They did not realize during the transaction that Taylor was the owner of the property and was acting for both sides.

Living with the dying

Cooper . . . increasing the awareness of death's realities

The focus of Hospice Victoria will be on the care of its patients — unlike most other medical facilities which emphasize cure.

Hospice Victoria is a program being developed to pull together the existing services provided for terminally ill patients, their families and medical staff.

Ruthella Cooper, the project's co-ordinator, a nurse and a widow, says North American society has difficulty accepting death as part of the natural cycle of life.

Health care professionals tend to consider a patient's death as a personal failure rather than accepting it as inevitable. They may feel inadequate, said Cooper, and those emotions affect how they treat the dying patient.

Society has become distanced from death — families no longer look after their old and dying members — making death even more unknown and frightening for patients and families facing it.

Cooper hopes the hospice program, one of several developed across Canada in the last five years, will be able to co-ordinate the already considerable support available from different sources in the city to provide the best possible service to those involved with death.

Although the term hospice suggests a building, Cooper says, the program she's working with will be more of an attempt to increase awareness of the realities of death.

The program works out of the Bay Pavilion at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

When it begins operating — Cooper hopes by fall — it will provide seven beds for short-term stays. It will not be a place where people diagnosed as terminally ill come to die.

The beds will allow more people to stay with their families rather than being housed in acute care hospital beds. The hospice's beds will be available to take patients for short stays to give their family a rest from the responsibilities of caring for them at home.

People most often prefer to stay at home rather than being hospitalized if they can be assured their families won't find it too difficult to care for them.

That's just as well, said Cooper, because acute care hospitals don't provide ideal care for the terminally ill patient.

Hospitals are geared to providing fast, efficient care to help patients get well and go home. Staff find it difficult to provide that kind of care for most of their patients while also providing the care a terminally ill patient needs.

Pain control is the main medical care provided the terminally ill but often another important need — to talk to someone about their death — goes unheeded.

But medical personnel are becoming more interested in the right way to deal with dying patients.

Cooper said there was almost no formal discussion of death and care for the terminally ill when she trained as a nurse. But more information is now given to students in the classroom and at seminars for practising professionals.

The hospice also plans to hire a part-time doctor to work in cooperation with the patient's own doctors. Mainly the doctor will be able to provide the most up-to-date information about effective pain control.

More information about new ways of administering old drugs is being learned these days, said Cooper.

Families of the patients will also be an important focus of the program, said Cooper.

There the support offered will depend on what the individual needs.

The hospice will have special bereavement follow-up care for families.

"Grief is a natural process but society says 'once a funeral is over please don't cry in public.' We hope to be able to help people accept the death and go on living their lives."

Cooper said studies have found that the worst cycle of grief lasts for about a year after the loss. During that time people, after experiencing a loss in any form such as a death or a divorce, often suffer more illnesses and sometimes even die themselves.

An information night will be held Aug. 20 and anyone interested in volunteering for this type of work or learning more about the hospice concept is invited.

TOWN TALK

Premier Bill Bennett may have scotched fall election speculation on the weekend with his definite negative reply to reporters' questions, but nobody seems to have informed party workers.

At the Victoria NDP offices on Blanshard, there's a sign in the window: "Provincial election — register now."

A block down the street at the Victoria Socred offices is a similar sign urging passersby to come in and check the voters' list to see if they are registered for the impending contest.

The road between Duncan and Lake Cowichan looks like the Alaska Highway these days after the highways department dumped tons of tar and gravel to seal-coat the road — and motorists are mad at the mess it's making.

Flying stones are breaking 30 or 40 windshields a day and drivers are getting the old runaround when they complain.

"I travelled the thing Sunday night and got three breaks," complained Richard Taylor of Victoria. He saw five other broken windshields.

He complained to Doman's, whose big 18-wheel trucks are kicking up a lot of gravel, the highways department and ICBC but didn't get any satisfaction. ICBC says it's $50 deductible, please.

"I don't think I should have to pay $50 deductible when it's the bloody government that's doing it," fumes Taylor.

Patricia Lach was here from Western Australia on the weekend to take a walk down memory lane and try to trace any record of the years her father, the late George Longbotham, lived here in the early 1920s.

She was a baby at the time.

The family lived at 1370 Hillside and her father ran a hauling contracting business with the late Gordon Mogg, who lived at 1062 Newport. The company was called General Service Transport Ltd.

The search was fruitless and Lach contacted Town Talk to ask for help. If there is anybody still around Victoria who knew either of the partners or their company she'd appreciate hearing from them. The address is 90 Strickland St., Denmark, Western Australia, 6333.

Victoria inventor Osmo Joronen expects to hear Friday whether he has finally got a foot in the door of the lucrative American market.

Joronen, a biologist turned furniture salesman, has invented an aquarium feeder that is activated by the fish.

The New York company of Penn Plax, which sells electrically-activated feeders, has until Friday to make up its mind whether to manufacture Joronen's feeder, which would sell for under $10 in the U.S. compared to about $50 for the electrically-operated feeder.

Meanwhile, the James Bay company of Scott Plastics has manufactured 1,000 for the Canadian market and Joronen says 300 have been sold in Victoria and the Lower Mainland.

A Gordon Head family burned out of its home Sunday is moving back to the site in a trailer during reconstruction of the house at 5240 Santa Clara.

Jack Enston, wife Margretta, four children and the family car escaped the early morning blaze which levelled the house and everything in it, including two pet dogs. The loss was only partly covered by insurance.

But their spirits got a lift today with the offer of a doberman pup to replace one of the lost dogs.

"That would really be appreciated," said Enston, when he learned of the gesture by dog breeder Janet Morris.

Federal ministers have a habit of promising goodies when they visit the west coast these days but Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne made one he hadn't bargained for when he recently visited CFB Esquimalt.

Noting this coast's primary role is training in anti-submarine warfare, a reporter asked him when we could expect to get our very own submarine.

The minister thought we had one and was surprised to learn there's been no replacement for the aging HMCS Rainbow that was sold for junk in March, 1977.

The minister promised to see if a sub could be sent from the east.

The navy isn't holding its collective breath.

University of Victoria economist Dr. I.D. Pal last week became the first to take part in a new reciprocal exchange agreement with a Chinese university when he delivered a seminar in Shanghai.

Pal presented a citation of agreement to the East China Normal University, represented by vice-president of research Xia Yan, in a ceremony on the Shanghai campus Aug. 4.

The two institutions will exchange publications, students, researchers and visiting faculty in one of the first such agreements of its kind since the 1949 revolution in China.

Pal, who is acting dean of arts and science at UVic, gave a seminar on Western Theories of Economic Development.

Light showers caused by fragments of meteoric matter have been visible for last few nights between 1 and 2 a.m. and will continue to be seen in the eastern heavens if overcast does not interfere.

The annual August event, although not monitored by Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, has been seen by scientist Dr. John Hutchings, who said it lacks the spectacular light-emitting show of a major meteor.

Particles are actually debris from the Swift-Tuttley Comet of 1862, drawn into the earth's atmosphere where they vaporize in tiny showers of celestial sparks.

The comet itself is not due to reappear for another year or two.

Passengers waiting to board the hydrofoil Flying Princess on her Saturday evening run back to Seattle had to cool their heels for more than two hours.

Instead of arriving at 6 she put in at 8 and scurried off 20 minutes later.

B.C. Steamship Company manager David Price said fog in the Strait of Juan de Fuca forced her to slow down and become hull-borne at 20 knots instead of the 40-knots she makes when foil-borne.

Fog is common in the strait at this time of year and this is the third time in a month the speedy craft has had her foils clipped, as it were.

Dog owners rushing to get shots for pets

Ted Neis, administrator of the Greater Victoria Veterinary Hospital, said today he knows of only one case in this area. The animal was treated and cured.

But he said Greater Victorians, alarmed by reports the virus has killed dogs in Ontario and reached epidemic proportions in Edmonton and killed 41 animals in a Seattle animal shelter last week, are taking no chances.

A spokesman for the Oak Bay Pet Clinic said there has been panic because of publicity about the disease although there is no big problem in Victoria.

"It's very much a panic situation. At least half of the phone calls are for vaccinations," said a spokesman at the Quadra Animal Clinic.

She said the clinic only has 10 doses left.

There is a waiting list and the clinic is only vaccinating puppies under a year old, or dogs more than nine years old.

The vaccine is in short supply, she said, because it is made in the U.S. and is so new that it was stopped at the border for a while until it could be tested.

She said the clinic has had calls from Toronto and Seattle, asking for the vaccine.

In contrast to the Victoria situation, Sidney residents appear to be calmer.

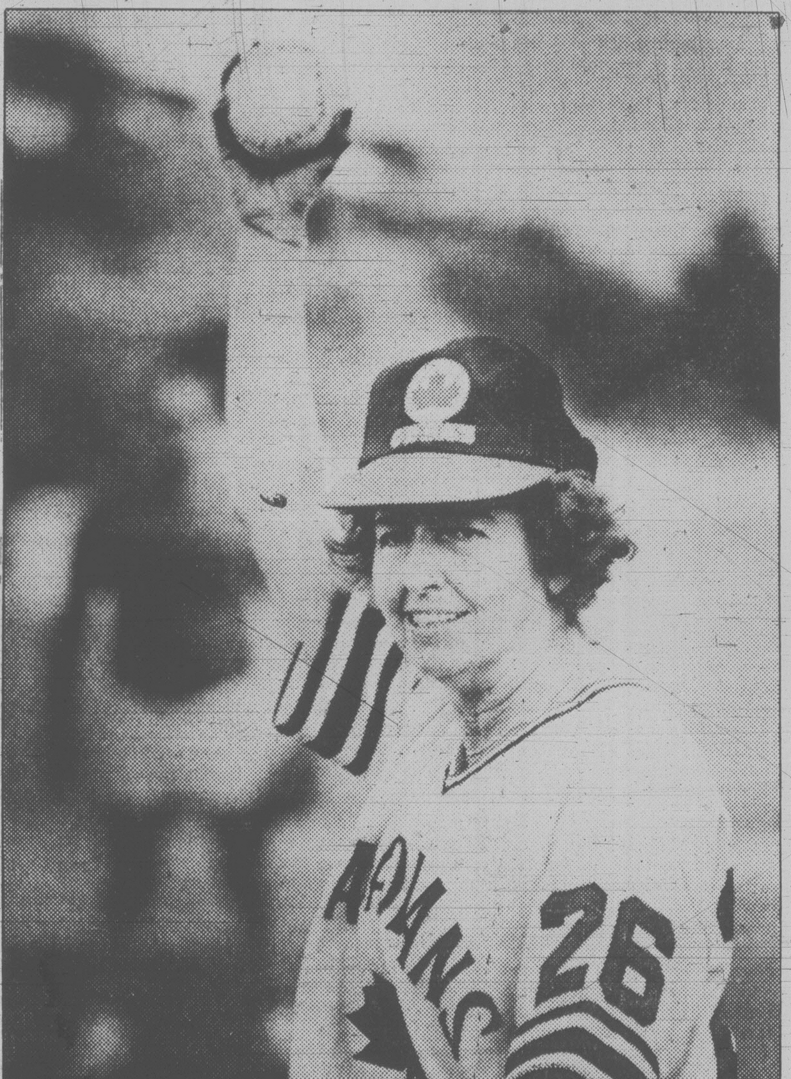
Dr. Ben Schmidt of the Sidney Animal Medical Clinic said, while a fair number of dog-owners are concerned, there has been no panic.

"They've kept their cool. I guess Sidney residents are more together."

Schmidt said the parvo virus has been on Vancouver Island for some time. He diagnosed a case last November and there was indirect evidence back in 1978.

The disease is spread through infected feces and other secretions. Weak animals and puppies are most susceptible.

The symptoms are vomiting, dehydration, loss of appetite and diarrhea.



RIGHT HANDER Grace McCarthy — she's certainly not a leftie, just ask the NDP — displayed form on the mound Monday night as MLAs met Press Gallery in annual softball game. MLAs claim they won 13-12 but media batters moaned that Grace, like most politicians, threw only curves. At the legislature today, there was evidence of how seriously the government took the game. Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen — who slid face first into second base — arrived for work in a wheelchair, nursing what could be torn knee ligaments.

Fire hazard closes roads

The B.C. Forest Service has closed all forest access roads on southern Vancouver Island, effectively shutting down most logging operations.

Ken Epp of the B.C. Forest Service said the fire hazard is extreme.

He said the closure will be lifted if there is any significant rainfall. Continuing dry, sunny weather has pushed the hazard to extreme or close to extreme on most of the island.

There is a particularly high hazard in the Cowichan area and most logging operations there voluntarily shut down.

The hazard is expected to prompt a ban soon on open fires in provincial parks and campsites.

Fire bombers from Abbotsford and Campbell River are on red alert from noon to 8 p.m., meaning they can scramble — take to the air — almost instantly.

Except for beach areas, parking lots and the odd picnic site, Mount Douglas Park, including Churchill Drive, and Thetis Lake Park, were closed Monday by the Victoria parks department.

Voting starts on police pact

Member municipalities in the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association voted today on a proposed settlement of the month-old police strike.

However, no announcement is expected until police union members vote later this week.

The tentative contract which would end the month-old police strike was announced Monday by Labor Minister Jack Heinrich, although no details were available.

Police in Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt scheduled a ratification vote for Thursday night.

Police in the three municipalities started limited job action July 9 when they traded uniforms for casual civilian clothes and slowed down the normal reporting process for complaints and investigations which will increase overtime later.

Mediator Clive McKee worked with both sides in reaching the tentative settlement and imposed a news blackout when he was appointed two weeks ago by Heinrich.

The main issue in the strike was the move to standardize police contracts. The GVLRA wanted to do it on the basis of the lowest common denominator, the police unions charged, but the municipal bargaining group replied that the unions wanted to take only the best features of all the contracts.

Salmonbellies hit back

Times News Services

The New Westminster Salmonbellies kept their playoff chances alive Monday by nipping the Coquitlam Adanacs 12-11 in the fourth game of their Western Lacrosse Association semi-final series at New Westminster.

The Adanacs now lead the series 3-1 with the next game scheduled tonight in Coquitlam.

Vancouver Burrards and Victoria Shamrocks are tied 2-2 in their semi-final series with the next game scheduled at Victoria's Memorial Arena Wednesday night.

Shamrocks squared the series Sunday at Kerrisdale in Vancouver with a 15-12 victory. Jim Lynch, who missed the first two games of the series, scored six goals.

Shamrocks won the first game, Burrards the second at home and the third at Memorial Arena Saturday.

The Salmonbellies jumped into a quick lead and were ahead 8-3 after the first period against Coquitlam.

At the end of the second they were ahead 12-7 before the Adanacs staged a comeback to narrow the count.

Coquitlam outshot New Westminster by 60 to 51.

What's an owner to do - especially a new one?

Notes and like that:

Earlier this season, Si Spaven, an avid horse lover (and player), was one of a group that purchased the four-year-old brown colt Wickanninish. Wickanninish won two races at the beginning of the meeting. Then came a dry spell until he scored in a non-winners-of-three event back on July 31.

Naturally, Spaven had more than a passing interest in the result of the race and, when it was over (it was the 10th and last race on the card that day), he was so excited he immediately rushed to the mutuel department to get his reward. Winners are sometimes hard to come by. The other owners present rushed to the track to have their picture taken. Si, of course, is new at his owner's job, got his priorities mixed, hasn't heard the end of it and isn't about to get a picture either.

Incidentally, it's no secret that the Sandown horse list was seriously depleted this season when some of the Cloverdale set decided to invade the prairie circuit. And because of the usual run of injuries and illness, it is short right now as it heads into the final few weeks. Still, the owners and trainers are doing a good job of trying to fill the fields for the remaining 15 days of the meet.

On that subject, Sandown president and general manager Jim Keeling, Sr., has been quick to point out that the Calgary purses aren't that much greater than the Sandown purses and that generally the owners and trainers who shipped to the Alberta centres aren't doing any better financially than they would have done at Sandown, except for the better horses and bigger races.

Keeling said that Jim Mohorich, who has Billy Barker and Over Burden, among others, under his wing, has assured him he will be racing much of his stock at Sandown next year. Keeling also indicated that he wouldn't hesitate in going to Ontario and buying stock, bringing the horses west and selling them to B.C. owners if that becomes necessary in 1980.

Meanwhile, driver-trainer Joe Hudon, Sandown's leading driver, scored with Baron Nuff in a $4,500 event at Calgary Sunday. Senga Mandell, another Cloverdale favorite was second.

The jury is still out, but the question now is: does Kevin Alexander of the Shamrocks have a new consecutive game scoring record (43 games) or not? Kevin has scored in the last 43 games in which he has played, but consecutive is the key word. Kevin did not play in the final Mann Cup game last year, thus did not score, and thus, apparently may not have a consecutive-game scoring mark. The decision is anxiously awaited. Alfie Davy of New Westminster held the old mark of 41.

Otherwise, football fans who wish to acquire the Canadian Football League Record Manual for 1980, may do so. It's bigger and better than ever and includes, besides the usual facts 'n figures, such trivia as who kicked the shortest field goal. It was Cyril McFall of Calgary and the distance, eight yards. And also Winnipeg Bomber fans can take heart in that their favorites once won 20 consecutive games on the road. That was in 1960-62. The cost is $1.00 and the address: C.F.L. Record Manual, 11 King Street West, Toronto, Ont., M5H 1A3.

Also, a list has recently come to hand of soccer referees who have reached the top and have been so decreed by FIFA, the international ruling body of the game. For students of nomenclature, there are some dandies.

From China one of the seven new names is Mr. Bohong Zhong. From Cameroon, Paul Alain Hioba-Hioba and Andre Soppi-Tchobo. From Zaire, Kamba Mwamba Kabwe. And for public address announcers who need practice, try these: Watana Promosakhanasakolnakorn of Thailand or even Ferdinand Ananigan Voudoua Dravie-Anakpan of Togo.

If the name-is-the-thing — almost perfect for the job, it would seem, are: Mr. Bassey Eyo-Honesty from Nigeria and Mr. Hamlet Rightway from Indonesia. Or, if you're that way inclined, how about Felix Gay of Trinidad.

Sports tonight

Pro baseball, softball playoffs and harness racing are the sports from which Greater Victoria fans have to choose between on tonight's program. As well, there's B.C. Lions football action on both television and radio for the stay-at-home sports buffs.

In baseball, Victoria Blues play Medford A's in a Northwest League game at 7 at Royal Athletic Park.

Softball playoffs continue at 6:30 in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League at Central Park, in the Heywood Men's League at Heywood Avenue Park and in the Macdonald Men's League at Macdonald Park.

And the summer harness racing season continues out at Sandown Raceway with first post set for 5:30.

Television

The Lions are at Calgary tonight and the CFL game starts at 6:30 with coverage on Channels 2 and 6.

Radio

CFL action with the Lions versus Calgary Stampeders will be carried live on CFAX1070 starting at 6:30.

Batman gets call to trap B.C. Lions

CALGARY (CP) — Doug Battershill, known as The Batman, is known for making big plays. Now he's getting a chance to do it on a regular basis.

Calgary Stampeders' second-year linebacker will start at left defensive back when the club plays host to British Columbia Lions tonight.

The Canadian Football League Western Conference game is slated for 6:30 p.m. PDT, and scheduled to be televised on the CBC western network.

Battershill is replacing Canadian Bernie Morrison who inherited the middle linebacking position when veteran Ray Nettles was axed last Friday. Terry Irvin is coming off the injured list to take up his old cornerback spot.

"I'm not surprised to be starting," said Battershill, who played high school football in Calgary.

"They cut Ray, for whatever reasons I don't know, but as soon as I heard that, I knew I'd be starting.

Battershill earned his reputation as a big play linebacker in his rookie year.

"In Winnipeg, I picked off a pass and went 37 yards for a touchdown last year. I was given the game ball. I guess that's been the highlight of my career so far.

"And against Edmonton, I caused this fumble of a punt with the score tied 19-19 and we went on to score. I just make big plays, that's what I've been known for."

"They'll be coming right at me and Ronnie (rookie defensive end Paggett). We'll be tested right from the start. I'm ready. I'll probably have a lot of man-to-man on (fullback John Henry) White."

Battershill will feel only some of the heavy pressure put on the Stampeders as a whole. With two wins and three losses so far this season, Calgary is in third place behind B.C.,

The Lions are looking to repeat their home-field success against the Stampeders last week and back-to-back losses for Calgary could mean a struggle with Winnipeg Blue Bombers for the WFC's last playoff berth.

Calgary head coach Ardell Wiegandt has done some shuffling, including reactivating Irvin, releasing Nettles and moving Kelvin Kirk from the defensive secondary back to offence, where he began.

Hyman's bat powers Blues

With Don Hyman getting three hits — two home runs and a double — and driving in two runs, Victoria Blues pounded Medford A's 13-6 Monday night at Royal Athletic Park.

However, the Blues failed to gain ground as Bellingham Mariners won their game, 7-6 over Eugene Emeralds, to remain three games in front of Victoria in the Northwest League's Northern Division.

Blues continue their series with Medford at Athletic Park tonight before playing host to Southern Division-leading Eugene Emeralds on Wednesday and Thursday.

On Monday, Medford committed six errors to contribute to its demise.

The A's jumped out with four runs in the first inning but the Blues battled back, improving their record to 29-23.

Eckwood spoils Stabler's debut

By The Canadian Press

Tampa Bay's Jerry Eckwood appeared in midseason form with a razzle-dazzle 61-yard halfback pass for a touchdown Monday night that led the Buccaneers to a 21-7 National Football League exhibition victory over Houston in Kenny Stabler's debut with the Oilers.

And the veteran quarterback's first game with the Texas club was an impressive one.

"I need to learn the system a little bit better, but I'm getting more comfortable every day," said Stabler, obtained in an off-season trade with Oakland that sent Dan Pastorini to the Raiders.

Stabler complted nine of 15 passes for 58 yards.

In another exhibition game, New England Patriots defeated Los Angeles Rams 35-31.

Eckwood's third-quarter pass to Isaac Hagins opened a 21-7 lead and the Oilers never challenged.

Quarterback Mike Rae, formerly with Toronto Argonauts, teamed with Eckwood early in the third quarter during an 80-yard drive that put the Buccaneers ahead for good.

Rae was the top Tampa Bay quarterback, completing eight of 17 passes for 83 yards.

Bucs lead NL East as Expos whipped

By The Canadian Press

It was a soggy night but it didn't dampen the enthusiam of Pittsburgh Pirates as they edged New York Mets 2-1 Monday night in a National League baseball game called after 5½ innings due to steady rain.

It was the eighth consecutive victory for the Pirates and it moved them into sole possession of first place in the NL East division.

"No way we wanted a rainout tonight — we are ready to go," said right fielder Mike Easler, who along with second baseman Phil Garner made game-saving defensive plays in the New York sixth inning.

"We've been playing great, we've got that momentum going, nobody wants to stop," said Easler, who made a shoestring grab of a looping drive down the line with two men on base.

Shortly before the game was ended by the umpires, the Pirates learned that second-place Montreal Expos had been beaten 16-0 by St. Louis Cardinals.

"I know the Expos wish it had rained there tonight," said the grinning Easler. "But we can't look at Montreal.

"We just got to play our game. If we keep playing our game the season will take care of itself.

In other NL games, Philadelphia Phillies played to a 5-5 tie with Chicago Cubs when their game was suspended after 10 innings due to darkness, Cincinnati Reds blanked San Diego Padres 1-0, Atlanta Braves nipped Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 and San Francisco Giants edged Houston Astros 5-4.

The Pirates scored both their runs in the second inning off loser Roy Lee Jackson, 1-3. Willie Stargell singled and took third on a double by Bill Madlock. Then Lacy rapped a sacrifice fly to score Stargell and Madlock came home on Ed Ott's groundout.

Solomon, 7-3, pitched a six-hitter and allowed the only Mets run in the fourth when Henderson walked, stole second and Youngblood beat out an infield hit, scoring Henderson.

"It's going to happen to everyone once in a while," St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog said of Montreal's lopsided defeat. "They have a good team."

Tony Scott banged out four hits, one of them a triple, and drove in three runs for the Cardinals who knocked the Expos out of a share of first place in the NL East.

Ted Simmons also drove in three runs and Leon Durham belted a two-run homer to highlight a 16-hit St. Louis barrage against four Montreal pitchers.

One of the four was a veteran utilityman, Tommy Hutton, who took the mound in the eighth inning for only the second time in his lengthy pro career.

"I just as soon do that than have them use somebody they could use tomorrow," said Hutton. "I think they knew I throw batting practice.

Vida Blue, with relief help from Al Holland and Greg Minton, won his first game in two months as San Francisco defeated Houston. Blue, 10-6, allowed six hits and three runs over five innings in his third appearance since coming off the disabled list. Holland worked three innings and Minton came on in the ninth to record his 12th save.

In American League action, Reggie Jackson belted his 400th major league carer homer, while Aurelio Rodriguez added a two-run homer as New York Yankees beat Chicago White Sox 3-1. Rudy May 10-5, picked up the win.

"I hope that takes the pressure off the team," said Jackson. "I know it takes the pressure off me."

Baltimore Orioles sneaked past Kansas City Royals 2-1 as Dennis Martinez tossed an eight-hitter and Eddie Murray hit a solo homer.

Get properly affiliated, says Feller

Bob Feller indicates three no-hitters

Bob Feller, a master on the mound during an 18-year baseball career with Cleveland Indians, has no desire to return to the major leagues in any capacity.

Considered one of the best right-handers in the history of baseball, he's vitally interested in the sport and has definite views on its future. But he has seen too many of his contemporaries fired or otherwise replaced for no real fault of their own.

Visiting Victoria on Monday to take part in Quality Inn's franchise agreement with the Colony Motor Inn, Feller says he's too busy with broadcasting, sales promotion for hotels, television commercials and his family farm to worry about a job such as a pitching coach for a major-league club.

The Hall-of-Famer spends the summer months touring Canada and the United States on behalf of hotel chains — conducting clinics and speaking at functions — and retains close associations with all major league clubs.

"Too political, much too political," the 61-year-old resident of Gates Mills, Ohio said in answer to a question about joining a club as manager or coach.

"A pitching coach is a genius if the team is first, a bum if it's last — no matter how much he does to help the players. And if a manager is fired, the coaches usually follow."

If coaching isn't his thing, Feller is a strong proponent of proper promotion and has a wide knowledge of what works in the minor leagues.

"The proper affiliation is the main thing as more and more clubs are realizing that a good farm system is an aid to success. College ball is fine but nothing can replace a solid grooming in the minors.

"But independent teams (such as Victoria Blues of the Northwest League) have a tough time and it's basically a missionary proposition, take the game to the masses but don't count on making any money.

"There are teams in Greensboro (South Carolina), St. Petersburg (Florida), Nashville, Columbus, Denver, Salt Lake City all doing very well with excellent promotion work. The team in Greensboro is owned by country music people and they really work at putting fans in the park — an affiliation with the (New York) Yankees helps too."

As for expansion of the majors, Feller doesn't see much chance of leagues taking in such cities as Vancouver or Miami without covered stadiums being available.

"There may be a chance of teams relocating in these areas but it's doubtful."

As for the future of the game, Feller, who pitched three no-hitters in his major league career including the only one pitched on opening day, believes pay television will have a major impact although major league baseball will always have fan support.

He's not keen on baseball indoors, feeling the lack of sun, wind and the occasional rain shower takes away from the strategy as does the artificial turf.

"It's not the same, sitting in these domes, as baseball and other sports such as football are meant to be enjoyed outdoors."

He won't be pinned down to naming favorite players of the present generation although he feels infielders George Brett of Kansas City Royals and Rod Carew of California Angels are almost as good with the bat as anyone since Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, and pitchers J.R. Richard of Houston Astros, Steve Carlton of Philadelphia Phillies and relief ace Bruce Sutter of Chicago Cubs would compare favorably with any hurlers of the past.

"It may be age or my memory," Feller admits "but there doesn't seem to be the superstars in the game today. There are many fine batters, some great prospects like Brett, but nobody to compare to Williams, or Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich (Yankee stars of Feller's era of the mid-30s to mid-50s).

"Baseball has changed since the 1930s and 40s, there's much more emphasis on relief pitchers now and hitting home runs instead of putting down sacrifice bunts, and that's not all bad as the fan interest has rarely been higher. It's different, that's all."

The U.S. Professional Golfers' Association long-driving championship, held in conjunction with the PGA championship, is big business.

The prize money this year was $50,000, but that is only the start. Evan (Big Cat) Williams had trouble buying a sandwich when he tried the regular tour. After winning the long-drive title, Williams became financially successful through endorsments and appearances.

Manufacturers, particularly those who make golf balls, also consider the gorilla competition a nice plum. What else is there to do but reap in the profits when you can advertise the fact that "our ball" goes further than any other one on the market?

For ball manufacturers, this particular honeymoon is over.

When the big belters stepped up for the long-drive championships at Rochester last week, they didn't know what kind of ball they were hitting.

Some 8,000 balls were supplied for this year's hitting contest, and none of them bore a trademark. The only identifying mark was "National Long Driving Championship."

The mystery ball also was used for sectional and district qualifying.

The purpose of the competition, sponsored jointly by Golf Digest, the PGA and Buick, is to raise funds for the U.S. Junior Golf Foundation. It is felt that advertising projects taking advantage of the fund-raising program detract from the primary objective.

Speaking of long-driving competitions, Victoria's Jim Rutledge took the distance honor, and first prize of $125, at the Saskatchewan Open at Saskatoon at the weekend.

Rutledge won $1,212.50 for finishing in a tie for third place, and not $800, as reported by The Canadian Press wire service. We knew CP's money breakdown was wrong, requested a correction or clarification, but did not get it and the Times, unfortunately, printed the erroneous figures Monday.

CP, and others, do have problems understanding how the breakdown works. Dave Barr was shown to have won $1,700, Eric Fostey $1,350, Paul Kennedy $1,000 and Rutledge $800 although all finished with 54-hole totals of 209.

To do it properly, the four sums are totalled ($4,850), then divided by four to get the correct figure ($1,212.50).

BRIEFLY: Exactly one month away, the B.C. Open is expected to get a boost with the announcement, any time now, that Dan Halldorson is a confirmed starter . . . There had been doubt because the Manitoba pro had been considering an all-expenses-paid invitation to a European tournament . . . The Open, at Glen Meadows, starts with the Pro-Am on Sept. 10 . . . The big need, at the moment, is caddies . . . Anyone interested in carrying a bag is asked to contact Al Robertson at the Glen Meadows' pro shop (656-3921) . . . Halldorson, Rutledge, Bob Beauchemin, John Morgan and all are in Edmonton for this week's Labatt's CPGA Classic . . . Also travelling is Nancy Callan . . . The B.C. junior champion, only 15, left Monday for London, Ont., and the Canadian junior women's tournament . . . Another 15-year-old, Jamie Harper of Nanaimo, has been named to the Junior Americas Cup team that will play in Hawaii.

Neglected winners in recent times were Gorge Vale's Brian DeGirolamo, whose 71-76-70 — 218 performance on a tough track carried him to a nine-stroke victory over Uplands' Lanny Sawchuck in the Nanaimo Amateur; and George Bigelow and Bill Allan, who won their divisions in the Canadian seniors' show . . . Having a good summer is 22-year-old Dave Rands of Uplands . . . He finished fourth in the Bellingham Amateur at the weekend after earlier winning the Spalmucheen Open and a second at Vernon . . . Luxton Cup winner at Victoria Club was Jim Black, who defeated Del Hawkeshaw in a playoff.

Among hole-in-one celebrants reported in recent days: Roy Mackie, Don Wagg and Ray Cranston, all on Oak Bay's second; Ron Williams, on Cedar Hill's 15th; Keith Rowlands, on Gorge Vale's 16th; Borge Larsen, on the 11th, and Crawford Glew, on the 17th, at Uplands.

Strong finish gets Erv home in front

ERV PARENT
. . . takes medal honors

Erv Parent, long one of the Pacific Northwest's foremost amateurs, played the final 12 holes in three-under-par figures to capture medal honors in the 58th annual Seniors' North West Golf Association championships Monday.

The Seattle veteran fired 35-35 — 70 over the par 34-37 — 71 Victoria Golf Club course to finish three strokes ahead of Ray Cranston of the host club. Defending-champion Bill Thompson of Victoria and Keith Welts of Seattle, last year's finalist, were next with 74s.

It took scores of 78 or better to capture one of the 16 berths in the championship.

In addition to Cranston and Thompson, five other Victorians qualified for the championship. They were Malcolm MacKay, Gord Verley, Lou Williams and Bill McColl, all of the host club, and Royal Colwood southpaw Gord Millin.

The annual International team match between Canada and the U.S. wound up in a 5-5 tie Sunday. Possession of the trophy was decided on a toss of the coin and the U.S. team won.

In the committee room, Ken Newbury of Vancouver was elected the SNWGA president, succeeding Bruce Shorts of Seattle. George Akers of Spokane is first vice-president and Bob Smith of Portland second vice-president. Ted Cabeldu of Victoria was named governor to serve a three-year term.

Smythe tripped in sectional final

COWICHAN BAY — Peter Smythe of Victoria, Vancouver Island's top-ranked player, was nipped 6-4, 6-7, 6-4 Sunday by John Delaney of Portland in the men's singles final of the Pacific Northwest sectional tennis championships at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club.

Breakers gain playoff berth

Despite the fact they were only runners-up in the provincial senior "B" women's softball championships which ended Sunday, Victoria Island Dryco Breakers have been invited, along with the tourney winners Lakeside Mercury of Nanaimo, to compete in the Western Canada championships in Nanaimo on the Labor Day holiday weekend.

The Breakers' lineup for the Western Canada event will be Pam Jones, Kathy McHarg, Doreen Newton, Barb Bissenden, Sue Moilliet, Bea McKenzie, Lani Robertson, Lindy Arnold, Debbie Malanson, Linda Cunningham, Donna McTavish, Sheri Gail and Sharon Bradley plus pick-ups Sandy Milliken and Yeta Dilalla of New York, New York.

Both playoff series in the Victoria-Saanich Women's League were deadlocked at 1-1 Monday night when Bemister's Welding and Butler Brothers scored victories at Hyacinth Park.

Bemister's shut out New York, New York 3-0 and Butler Brothers defeated Breakers 3-1 to even the semi-finals.

Marilyn Bolton was the big gun for Bemister's, pitching a two-hitter as well as belting two hits and scoring two runs.

Mavis Underwood was the winning pitcher for Butlers, who staged a three-run scoring spree in the fifth inning.

The playoff series continues Wednesday night.

Coast Projects defeated Mayfair Insurance 4-1 in the opening game of the Macdonald Men's League best-of-five playoff final series at Macdonald Park.

Knee injury sidelines Ian Bridge

SEATTLE (AP) — Starting defender Ian Bridge of Seattle Sounders will miss the North American Soccer League team's last two regular-season games and all playoff action with a knee injury.

Club officials said Monday that Bridge, 20, of Victoria, would enter hospital for an arthroscopic examination today.

He received suspected ligament damage in his right knee Saturday night in a 1-0 Seattle loss to New York Cosmos.

Metal crew takes playoff crown

The Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League regular season champions downed Victoria Athletics 8-7 Monday night at Pearkes Arena to win the best-of-three series in two straight games and earn the host team berth in the provincial final here this weekend.

Mark Roberts led the winners with two goals and Randy Bryant chipped in a goal and three assists. Rob Clifford scored three goals for the Athletics and Kevin Kennedy had a goal and three assists.

Esquimalt held period leads of 3-2 and 8-7 and goalkeeper Jim Fisher made 48 saves compared to 32 for Jerry Lindal of the Athletics.

Esquimalt will meet the West Coast Senior League representative at 6 p.m. Friday while Nanaimo Midnight Auto, representing the North Island, and Rossland Redmen, the Interior champions, tangle at 9 p.m. in the first round of the three-day series at Pearkes Arena.

'Less serious' Canadians pull off tennis surprises

TORONTO (CP) — At the tender age of 25, Greg Halder of Toronto says he's playing less-serious tennis and enjoying it more.

"I'm realistic enough to know that I'm a good player, not a great one," Halder said Monday after a 3-6, 7-6, 6-4 win over 15th-seeded Bruce Manson of the United States in the first round of the Player's International Canadian Open championships.

"I'll never be one of the top 20 or 30 players in the world, so I'm taking the game less seriously. I'm out there to play to enjoy it."

Halder rather enjoyed himself in Monday night's centre-court match at the National Tennis Centre at York University, but the victory wasn't without its anxious moments.

Halder was down two-match points in the second-set tiebreaker before prevailing 9-7, then broke Manson in the ninth game of the deciding set and held service in the next to advauce to the second round.

Robert Van't Hof of the United States provided the biggest upset of the day with a 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 win over seventh-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico. Van't Hof, 21, is the NCAA singles champion from University of Southern California.

Bill Cowan of Toronto, who had to qualify for the $325,000 tournament, also emerged victorious in Monday's first-round play with a 6-4, 6-3 win over Bruce Kleege of the United States, also a qualifier.

In other first-round men's results, Tim Gullikson of the U.S. beat Stephane Bonneau of Quebec City 6-0, 6-7, 6-1; Rick Fisher of the U.S. downed Francois Synaeghal of Montreal 6-0, 6-0; Trey Waltke of the U.S. beat Brian Millar of Toronto 6-2, 6-2 and fifth-seeded John Sadri of the U.S. defeated Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-3.

In women's first-round action, Sherry Acker of the U.S. beat Bettina Bunge of the U.S. 7-6, 2-6, 6-3 and Stacy Margolin of the U.S. defeated Wendy Barlow of Toronto, formerly of Victoria, 6-1, 6-1.

Most of the big guns at the tournament had the day off. Bjorn Borg of Sweden, the top seed, and second-seeded John McEnroe of the U.S. will play their first-round matches tonight against Canadian opponents.

Penalties for violations create 'Pac-5' football

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The presidents and chancellors of Pacific-10 conference schools have tackled the issue of widespread transcript and academic credit scandals in the U.S. college conference — in effect creating a Pac-5.

At a meeting Monday in Denver, the panel of chief executives cut in half the number of schools eligible for the 1980 Pac-10 football crown and for post-season football competition. The panel dealt out a variety of penalties to the universities whose athletic programs have been cited with academic violations. Oregon was the hardest hit, receiving a two-year probation.

The panel's unanimous ruling eliminated five schools — Southern California, UCLA, Arizona State, Oregon State and Oregon — from contention for any bowl berth, including the Rose Bowl. The panel decided, however, that all conference games played during the 1980 season will count in the standings.

Tournament of Roses chairman Nicholas has already picked out the favorites from the depleted field.

"It appears that Washington and Stanford look like the front-runners," he said.

Reaction from the affected schools ranged from bitter melancholia to apologetic acquiescence, but one voice said it didn't matter too much.

"We're sorry the five colleges have been ruled ineligible," said Bill Nicholas, chairman of the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena, "but those things happen.

"People will still come to the Rose Bowl game."

The five universities were penalised for violations of conference rules and standards in the areas of unearned credits, falsified transcripts and the unwarranted intrusion of athletic department interests into the academic processes of the respective universities, the report said.

Champion fails in record attempt

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Sar Simeoni, the Italian Olympic champion and world record-holder, won the women's high jump event Monday in an international track meet, but she failed to better her mark of 2.01 metres.

Simeoni and Poland's Ursula Kielan, the Moscow Games' silver medalist, cleared 1.94 metres. But both failed to clear at 1.96 in all three tries.

Poland's Elzbieta Krawczuk was third at at 1.91 with fewer misses than Canadian Debbie Brill, who also cleared that height.

A total of 262 athletes from 25 countries, including the United States, participated.

American Mary Decker captured the women's 1,500-metre run in 4:00.04.

The men's 100 went to Ernest Obeng of the Netherlands in 10.21 with Scotsman Alan Wells second.

Steve Ovett of Britain, who won the 800 at the Moscow Olympics, finished first in the 5,000 in 13:32.0.

Smith alters college plans

EDMONTON (CP) — Graham Smith of Edmonton, winner of six gold medals at the 1978 Commonwealth Games, says he has decided to give up his four-year scholarship at the University of California (Berkley) to return to Canada.

Smith, who won the 200-metre individual medley gold medal at the 1979 world championships, will continue his swimming and education at the University of Calgary this fall. His coach there will be Deryk Snelling, current coach of the women's national team.

Rain halts test cricket play

LEEDS, England (AP) — Rain washed out the fourth day of the cricket test match Monday, and the West Indies appeared certain to win the five-match series against England.

England needed to win the match to tie the series. But with one day left England, after trailing by 102 runs on the first innings, was still 80 runs behind.

Roberts clipped

SILVERSTONE, England (Reuter) — Randy Mamola, 20, of the United States beat out compatriot Kenny Roberts by 11 seconds at the British Grand Prix motorcycle championship Sunday.

Before the judge

A pre-sentence report was ordered in provincial court Monday by Judge Harold Alder on a 38-year-old man who pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property.

James Knox was found in possession of a gold ring which was among articles taken in a May 27 burglary at a downtown jewelry store. Knox was searched July 21 in a downtown liquor lounge.

Alder was told goods valued at more than $20,000 were taken in the break-in.

Police found pawn tickets in Knox's name on a companion at the time of the initial search. They subsequently recovered from pawn shops two more gold rings, part of the May 27 haul.

Prosecutor Nick Lang said Knox purchased the rings, valued at $255, for $15 several weeks earlier in the same lounge.

But a co-accused faces a preliminary hearing Dec. 2 on the charge which concerns the bulk of the items missing in the break-in.

A 38-year-old man who spent two weeks in jail awaiting disposition of a shoplifting charge was fined $100.

Smith was on mandatory supervision in connection with a Jan. 14, 1976, Vanouver conviction for two counts of trafficking in narcotics which got him a five-year jail sentence.

Smith has a record, mostly drug offences, back to 1960 and wants to stay in Victoria to be away from the Vancouver drug culture.

A Vancouver man convicted last month of three drinking and driving charges was back in court again.

Gabriel Loranger, 34, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and driving while suspended in Sooke on Saturday.

Loranger was on a day pass from Brannen Lake Treatment Centre when found drunk in the driver's seat of a vehicle stuck in a private yard. A bottle of liquor was beside him.

He was sentenced to five months on each charge with the recommendation the term be served at an institution with an alcohol treatment program.

Alder noted it was a 19-year-old Munns Road man's second conviction within a year for drinking and driving.

"That's a little bit too close," he told Kerry McCullough.

In July last year McCullough was given what the judge called a fair break when he was fined only $75.

"That didn't have any effect — I guess we better try the alternative," said Alder before sentencing McCullough to 14 days in jail.

Gloeckner was fined an additional $100 for wilful damage.

Cabinet ready to hit the rails

A tentative Sept. 22 start has been set by the provincial cabinet for a "working trip" on the B.C. Railway from North Vancouver to Prince George.

The date hinges on when the legislature adjourns.

Premier Bill Bennett said stops will be made along the way to allow meetings with local councils and to hear presentations from local groups — "and possibly make some on-the-spot decisions which would otherwise take sometime."

From Prince George, Bennett and the cabinet will go via CNR to Prince Rupert, returning to Vancouver Island on the Queen of the North ferry which runs between Prince Rupert and Port Hardy.

Bennett said he wants all his ministers to get a first-hand look at transport problems, "the solution of which is the key to northern development."

"Down here we sometimes misunderstand how vital transportation is, but the people who live in isolated areas don't misunderstand."

Sidney rejects condominium

An application by Cameo Developments Ltd. of White Rock to rezone a vacant lot at Fifth and Mills for a 45-unit condominium was turned down Monday by Sidney council.

Wildlife featured

The provincial government's environment ministry will sponsor a display Aug. 18-23 in the Mayfair shopping mall.

It will include a pair of live deer fawns, a huge stuffed Kodiak bear, murals and photographs, live fish and movies.

One-day blitz on Swan Creek

A stream enhancement program will be carried out Saturday on Swan Creek between Swan Lake and Douglas Street.

The project is being undertaken for the Swan Lake Christmas Hill Nature Centre by the Island Equipment Operators Association which will donate equipmemt and operators to complete the project in one day.

The project involves giving the present straight-sided drainage ditch a more natural appearance by curving the stream channel and creating gently sloping sides.

Shade trees will be planted later along the banks.

Finishing costs of the project will be financed by a grant from the Victoria Natural History Society.

A nature trail, accessible to people in wheelchairs, will also be completed this summer. The 550-foot trail, a combination of asphalt and boardwalk, will lead from the Nature House through a forested area to a small wharf on the lake.

Wheelchair access has also been provided into the Nature House.

The wheelchair path was financed with funds provided by the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, the Public Conservation Assistance Fund, the Victoria Natural History Society and the Saanich Kiwanis Club.

Victoria's economy hits new heights

Victoria's economy soared to new peaks in July with real estate sales at an all-time high and the tourist industry surpassing 1979 levels in the last half of the month.

Real estate sales totalled $43 million in July, up from $21 million in the same month last year.

The Victoria Real Estate Board said pent-up demand and relatively-low mortgages rates accounted for the record.

Meanwhile, a survey by the Canada Employment Centre showed the tourist industry, which had slumped from mid-May to mid-July, took off during the final two weeks of the month and continues strongly in August.

Revenues now are above 1979 levels.

Doug Yearwood, assistant manager of the local CEC office, said businessmen have become optimistic about the economy for the balance of the year.

Tourists began to arrive in record numbers with the end of the rain about July 15 and, if the weather holds, the city will enjoy a banner season.

Across the region the economy was strong on all fronts, except for logging where summer holidays are being extended due to a surplus of logs at sawmills.

B.C. Forest Products reported the lumber industry is improving and the outlook is for strong markets for the rest of the year.

Local housing starts are up and strength is returning to the construction industry.

Tourist spending accounted for some of the increase. Women's clothes, houseware and sporting goods were the big sellers. Men's clothing and heavy goods, while selling above 1979, were not quite as strong.

The Burrard Yarrows Corporation shipyard averaged 700 employees in July, up 100 from the same month last year. About 250 people are working on the new provincial government ferry, which will be completed in 1981.

The CEC's Farm Labor office had its highest job placement month on record. There was a steady demand for berry and vegetable workers as well as greenhouse employees. Some early potatoes were being harvested.

Oakland Fisheries, however, is having a slow season. There were only 80 employees in July, working a three-day week.

Klan ads vetoed

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — The Sun has decided to stop accepting advertising from the Ku Klux Klan, saying in an editorial that its aims are destructive to society.

Strippers, waiters laid off

Strippers and pub waiters are being laid off as beer supplies continue to dwindle because of the lockout of B.C. brewery workers.

A union official estimated Monday that 25 to 35 per cent of members employed in beer parlors and bars have already gone because there is no work.

The Liquor Distribution Branch said today there should be a general improvement in availability of U.S. beer in government liquor stores, although supplies will come nowhere near filling the demand.

The Tally-Ho has laid off one-third of its waiters and like many pubs has shortened its hours of operation to 12 from 14 hours a day.

Other hotels report smaller lay-offs. At the Ingraham, a spokesman said a couple of waiters have taken their holidays. At the Royal Oak Inn two employees out of a usual crew of a dozen have been laid off.

"It's not been that bad really," said a spokesman for the Saanich hotel.

Vern Ferguson, manager of the Imperial, said no one has yet been laid off at the Crown and I pub, although some staff are taking vacations.

"We hope to keep them on until it's over," he said. "But when the beer's gone, everybody's gone."

The Imperial has shortened hours somewhat, cutting off bottled beer sales at 11:30 p.m. although hard liquor remains available in the pub until the usual closing time of 1 a.m.

There are an estimated 1,200 union members on Vancouver Island. In addition, there are many more non-union establishments which have also laid off staff.

The beer shortage has also forced the lay-off of several strippers in town. Two performers at the Colony and another at the Century packed up their G-strings and went home for the duration this week.

As for liquid refreshment, the hotels report about a two-week supply of bottled beer on hand. One pub has a line on some real draft beer expected later this week.

"We may have some good news for the draft beer drinkers soon," said Royal Oak Inn manager Joe Isherwood.

"Come up take a look on Friday."

Liquor stores have American beer available some days but deliveries by the Liquor Distribution Branch are unpredictable and the stuff sells quickly.

"We haven't got any," said a clerk at the the Foul Bay store, although a shipment was supposed to be coming today. The usual delivery of 1,000 dozen Olympia goes within two hours, he added.

Scientologists want NDPer's apology

VANCOUVER (CP) — MLA Alan Passarell has refused to apologize to the Church of Scientology of B.C. for his statement in the legislature that the church was attempting to obtain Crown land through an affiliate group.

Passarell (NDP — Atlin) said in a telephone interview Monday from Victoria he is not prepared at this time to apologize.

The church in a news release demanded a retraction and labelled Passarell's remarks as a grossly irresponsible violation of office and group spokesman Gale Davidson said a letter was sent to the MLA demanding an apology.

The letter said Passarell was badly misinformed and should have verified his facts before saying the church had been granted a large amount of Crown land near Atlin in northwest B.C. through a group known as the God Bless You Holistic Society.

Passarell mentioned the Scientologists while questioning Lands Minister Jim Chabot last week.

Davidson said the church has no affiliation with the society and has no lands or financial interests in or around Atlin.

Passarell said later that he had four phone calls during the weekend from persons telling him to "leave our church alone."

Although the calls were not threatening, Passarell said, he is considering having his home phone number in Victoria delisted.

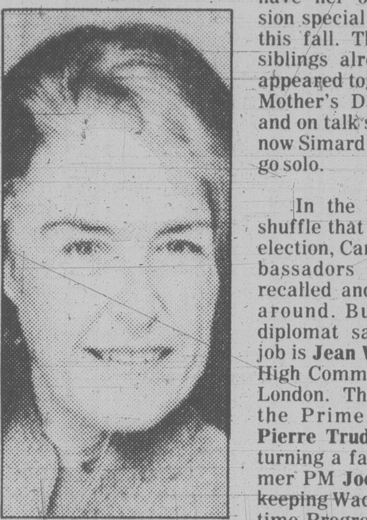
The newest celestial being on the TV series Charlie's Angels is Tanya Roberts, a former Torontonian. The Bronx-born angel likens herself more to the energetic, feisty Kate Jackson, who left the detective series more than a year ago, than to the languid, well-bred Jaclyn Smith and Cheryl Ladd. Roberts, 25, said in Los Angeles that she'll provide a contrast to the other two stars: "I just have a different sort of energy."

Just as singer Marie Osmond followed brother Donny into the spotlight, so is Quebec's Nathalie Simard achieving the fame of singing brother Rene Simard. Simard, who has the toothy grin, bangs and pixie-like good looks of her brother, is to have her own television special in Quebec this fall. The Simard siblings already have appeared together in a Mother's Day special and on talk shows, and now Simard is ready to go solo.



Wadds

In the diplomatic shuffle that follows an election, Canada's ambassadors are being recalled and switched around. But one top diplomat safe in her job is Jean Wadds, the High Commissioner in London. The word is the Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is returning a favor to former PM Joe Clark by keeping Wadds, a longtime Progressive Conservative, in her job. Apparently, Trudeau is grateful that the short-lived Clark government did not fire his old friend Gerard Pelletier, the ambassador in Paris, so will leave High Commissioner Wadd in London.

Shooting for a National Film Board documentary on Quebec singers Kate and Anna McGarrigle is now completed. The film, by Oscar-winning producer Derek Lamb, is to be finished in 1981. Leaving few aspects of the recording stars's life untouched, the film will include the McGarrigles' negotiations with Columbia Records, reactions from fans and radio station personnel, as well as the McGarrigle sisters's recent Carnegie Hall concert.

The eldest sister of the late Shah of Iran, Princess Shams, is staying in seclusion in southern California, according to a family spokesman. Robert Garrick said the princess was "grieving and very distressed at the death of her brother. Reports say the princess is either at her $1.5-million ranch-house or in Palm Springs.

Dear Abby:

About two years ago George got on this "cleanliness kick," and now he absolutely refuses to eat anywhere but home! His reason! He doesn't know how clean the kitchens, pots, pans, utensils, silverware, etc., are in other homes. Neither is he convinced that the food was prepared by one with clean hands.

A restaurant? Forget it. George says that even the best of them have roaches and rats!

Naturally we do a lot of entertaining at home, but our friends aren't able to reciprocate. I have quit making up excuses. When we're invited to someone's home, I simply say, "I have a crazy husband who won't eat anywhere but home, but we'll be glad to come after dinner."

In case you think my husband is a total nut, Abby, he owns his own business and his annual income has been in six figures for the last 10 years. He's the only millionaire I know who carries his lunch. What's wrong with him?

Islander

Dear Islander:

Your husband is a mysophobiac — one who has a morbid fear of filth or contamination. It won't kill him, but it's unfair to you. Invite a psychiatrist to dinner.

Dear Abby:

My problem is a pest I'll call Cindy. We have nothing in common except that our husbands are best buddies, and now we are neighbors.

Cindy makes a habit of coming over here uninvited when her husband works late. She has two whiny, cranky kids, ages two and three, who are still in diapers and on the bottle. I have no children by choice and do secretarial work at home, so it's not as though I'm a lady of leisure.

Last evening Cindy came over (at dinner time, as usual) and kept saying, "I really should go home and fix dinner for me and the kids because Dick (her husband) is working late tonight." I took the hint and invited her to stay and eat with us.

Cindy smokes constantly, and always my cigarettes because she doesn't want her husband to know she smokes. She's always borrowing groceries from me and never pays back, anything. Last night she used my last drop of milk to fill her baby's bottle!

When I tell my husband I am sick of Cindy, he says, "Be nice to her. She's my buddy's wife." What should I do?

Love Thy Neighbor(?)

Dear Love:

Nobody can impose on you without your co-operation — not twice, anyway. Cindy doesn't sound too bright, but she may need your friendship, so sit her down and have a heart-to-heart talk with her about the ground rules of visiting. And tell your husband if Cindy doesn't play by the rules, he will have to entertain his buddy's wife — and kids.

Business comes out of closet

VANCOUVER (CP) — Out of work, her personal life in ruins and bills stacking up, Joy Lapka succeeded in converting her closet full of expensive clothes — many bought on impulse and rarely worn — into pockets full of money.

And now she is owner of a budding chain of secondhand clothing stores.

"I began cleaning out my closet and selling clothes on consignment to a used clothing store in West Vancouver," said Lapka, 25.

"I kept an eye on the store and thought how I'd do things differently, how the owner could improve her business. I found the whole concept exciting."

She discussed her ideas with a friend who offered to provide the financing, and together in September, 1978, they opened Turnabout, a used clothing store next to a "couple of very ritzy stores."

"It was something totally new for this area. Many women came in to browse but left in a hurry when they discovered what we were."

But the idea caught on.

"People who don't really need the money are most excited about the store. They buy expensive clothes, and by bringing them here and selling them on consignment, they can clean out their closets and get extra cash instead of tossing out things."

The pair opened a second store in 1979, and Lapka is designing a third.

"I'd like to have the best quality secondhand clothing store on the West Coast. We've already got quite a reputation for our classy boutique look."

Turnabout, she said, is designed as a real women's boutique, specializing in quality clothing for women.

She insists she never gets tired of handling clothes, and waves a hand at a heap of sweaters, skirts and overflowing plastic and papr bags at her feet in her office. Every day is like Christmas.

"Each of those bags contains a mystery for me. I love opening them, sorting through the clothes, finding something good."

Lapka said working women who know their labels comprise the bulk of Turnabout's clientele.

Matrons, airline stewardesses and executives bring clothes for her to sell. They sign a 60-day contract that gives her the right to half the price she gets for each item. She and her clients agree on the selling price.

Prices are slashed on anything not sold in two or three weeks, and cut every second week thereafter. Items that don't sell go to thrift shops or are returned to the owner.

Getting quality goods is no problem, "and I can afford to make mistakes."

"If I take the wrong item, the worst that happens is it sits on the shelf for a few weeks."

Clashes add cash to cashmere cost

By SANDRA SALMANS
New York Times

HAWICK, Scotland — While recent events in Iran and Afghanistan sent tremors through much of the world, they took on a special significance in this graceful town and others in the Scottish border country. One-third of the world's cashmere comes from those two nations — China produces the bulk — and much of it comes here to be processed, spun and woven into Scotland's famous cashmere sweaters.

So far cashmere is still available, but prices have risen dramatically, said Alan Smith, chairman of Dawson International, the largest buyer and processor of raw cashmere in the world. Dawson, which also owns such well-known brands as Pringle of Scotland, Ballantyne, Braemar and Barrie, controls 60 per cent of the Scottish quality knitwear business and sells its yarn to the rest.

Industry leaders note that the supply of cashmere was tight even before the upheavals in Iran and Afghanistan. In the last few years the Chinese have begun manufacturing their own cashmere sweaters and therefore have been selling less raw fiber abroad. For a time "demand exceeded supply by nearly 300 per cent," said Smith, who sported the Dawson company tie embroidered with a cashmere goat. With a tripling in the price of cashmere, supply and demand have come back into balance, although nobody knows how long the situation will last.

The Chinese are now putting more cashmere back on the world market, relieving some of the pressure, Smith said, but he predicted that "the price of cashmere is not coming down." Demand has been buoyed by the energy shortage — cashmere, the world's rarest natural fiber, is one of the warmest — and the back-to-classics movement. In Britain the twin-set — the short-sleeved sweater and matching cardigan beloved of the upper-class — is making a comeback, and so are knitted skirts and dresses.

Many of the garments are produced here in two mills owned by Pringle, the largest manufacturer of cashmere knitwear in the world. Pringle, which was founded in 1815 and holds the royal warrant for keeping the queen in twin-sets, will turn out approximately 400,000 cashmere sweaters this year.

All of Pringle's cashmere is combed from the fleece of molting cashmere goats. In a process pioneered by Dawson 40 years ago, the matted, oily raw cashmere is scoured and de-haired to remove the coarser growth. At Dawson's mill in Kinross, across the Firth of Forth from Edinburgh, the fibre is dyed in the wool in a multitude of colors, and carded, or combed, into yarn. Some of the machinery, particularly the spinning mules that stretch and wind the yarn, remains virtually unchanged since the Industrial Revolution.

One of the popular myths about Scottish cashmere, nurtured by the industry, is that it has to be washed in soft Scottish water such as Hawick's Teviot River. While that used to be true, said Keith Brown, Pringle's research and development manager, "we now use chemically treated water from the town loch," or reservoir.

George Straith Ltd. and W. and J. Wilson Ltd. are two Victoria stores that carry Pringle and Ballantyne cashmere sweaters. A spokesman for the latter store said he had just received a shipment from Scotland anfd there had been an "extreme jump" in prices. A plain two-ply sweater, as an example, had risen in price from $195 to $250.

Intarsia sweaters, he said, cost up to $500 and the Vancouver company of Edward Chapman's Ladies Wear Ltd. had a "window dresser" sweater priced at $600.

A George Straith spokesman said his store had intarsia sweaters priced between $300 and $500.

Both men agreed that prices have been rising between 15 and 20 per cent each season but the W. and J. Wilson representative said he did not believe the last jump in prices had anything to do with the trouble in Iran and Afghanistan because the order he had just received was placed early in January.

He conceded it could add to the cost of future shipments, "People had better come down now before the prices go up again," he said.

While some wool intarsia is machine-made, all cashmere intarsia is handmade by the industry's most skilled workers.

Pringle has 40 intarsia machines at which men stand, working from graphic illustrations of the patterns they are reproducing in cashmere yarn. The most experienced workers seem to bob rhythmically back and forth over their frames as they weave, scarcely looking at the paper guide.

Not all the garments are going through the mill for the first time. Well-made cashmere sweaters are supposed to last two decades or more, according to Pringle, and some customers return theirs to the factory after 15 years to be milled and reshaped.

"Cashmere is soft, but not easily destructible," said William McEwan, Pringle's managing director. "It's the most fantastic product."

Nursing home need jars the emotions

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

Since my mother died, my father, who is 81 years old, lives by himself. My brother and sister and I have decided to find a nursing home for him. He is reconciled to going to one. We would like to find a nursing home that will give him some feeling of a home environment. How do we go about it?

B.J.

Dear B.J.:

The decision to place a parent, a relative or a friend in a nursing home is always filled with emotion and trepidation. Unfortunately, it is almost impossible to find a nursing home that will provide the quality of "home environment." Yet, many of the modern nursing homes are making elaborate efforts to incorporate in their organizations attitudes of kindness, caring and warmth.

Some nursing homes are purely custodial and are designed to accommodate guests who have no serious medical problems or handicaps. These residential homes provide room and board, with supervision for the safety, comfort and entertainment of their guests.

Other nursing homes offer moderate nursing care and are equipped to provide assistance for guests who may need help in getting in and out of bed, in dressing, in bathing and in walking.

In homes of this type, the clients can call their private physician whenever there is a need for medical attention.

A far more complicated arrangement is the nursing home for patients who are chronically ill or convalescing from a serious illness. This type of home provides highly skilled nursing care, reliably supervised by a staff of physicians and paramedical assistants.

Undoubtedly, your father's doctor knows many of the nursing homes in your immediate vicinity. He knows, too, the services that they can provide for his patient.

You can gather a great deal of information from local and national health and welfare agencies. The American Nursing Home Association and the National Council for the Accreditation of Nursing Homes can offer you guidance in making such an important selection.

It is virtually impossible for any one nursing home to supply for your father the family atmosphere he has enjoyed in his own home. But a well-run nursing home can offer him advantages that he might never have in his own home. Planned daily programs, recreational facilities, group participation, concerts, lectures, movies and creative endeavors fill each person's day with stimulating activity and companionship.

When you consider that all this is offered in addition to the assurance of safety, health care and psychological support, then the transition should not be difficult for you or your father to contemplate.

It must be remembered that a nursing home is not a substitute for the love and support of the family. His children's visits and their constant interest will be vital to your father's happiness and will compensate for those elements that are lacking in his new enviornment.

youth clinic

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am going on 18 years of age and I'm going out with this guy who I really like. The problem is that he is 32.

He asked me to go live with him and I want to, but I'm afraid of what my parents will say. I can't talk to my parents because they think I should go out with guys my own age. I don't want to give up my boyfriend but I don't want to get into an argument with my parents. What should I do?

Answer: If you are not sure of what to do then I would recommend that you stay at home. Part f your indecision may be because you have some doubts about whether it is the right thing to do to move in with "this guy".

You may have some doubts about how much this man cares for you. You obviously have feelings that your parents' opinions are important to you and that you want to respect them. I also wonder what you hope for yourself?

Do you want to go and live with a man because he asked you and you like him? Or do you hope for more? Do you want to love someone, and do you want to get married? Do you want your parents' approval of your boyfriend? And, importantly, what do you want? It is an important decision to leave home and live with someone and I would urge you not to make it casually.

Whether the person is older than you is not as important an issue as how you really feel about him, and how decisions you make concerning him affect your life and the opinions of other people.

Whatever you decide, I feel that you should involve your parents. If you feel strongly that you must live with your boyfriend, it is important to discuss your decision, whether they agree, with your parents.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I'm feeling really depressed and alone again as I have been for the last three years. I'm almost 16 and recently broke up with a really special guy who was 19. In the past, I have been really hurt by two older guys and went to a counsellor.

We never talked about why we broke up but I think we both felt the need. He seemed to really want me as a friend and now that I can cope with it we're drifting away.

He's gone for help, but I don't know what it did, he gives up everything too easy. In the past, I've been a quitter at everything but now am seeing myself in him. He hasn't got a job and is hurting himself and others without knowing.

He's very special and for only once in my life I felt love, for him. I've never tried to help someone this much before but I feel the need now. How can I?

Answer: You have a lot going for you, because you are perceptive about how you have been helped by him, and about your own shortcomings. You also believe in the importance in having a purpose in your life, and that he needs a purpose in his. Perhaps you and he could get to some kind of counselling, not necessarily to put you on the same basis with each other as before, but to help you both individually, and to help you fulfil your need to give him a purpose.

Your problem borders on the religious, so a priest or minister whom you can trust would be good.

Dear Dr. Levine:

About a week ago this guy I used to go out with and I were babysitting. Everything was OK when he first arrived but then we started wrestling and then we were on the couch in a very comfortable position. The next thing I knew, we were heavy petting which led to other things. I am not the type of girl who would do this. I'm 16 years old and have had a good upbringing. For a couple of days after this I felt so dirty and felt I shouldn't be alive. What can I do next time this happens?

Answer: In listening to "first-time" stories over the years, I have to conclude that yours is not particularly unusual. I'm not saying that you should treat it lightly or as meaningless, but I am saying that it is quite a common scenario.

But the pain, the remorse, the guilt, the confusion, the pleasure — these feelings afterwards are also the most frequently experienced.

You ask me what you can do the next time "it" happens — we aren't discussing an accident of nature. We're talking about a human actitivity which is at least 50 per cent under your control — it depends on feelings, motivations desires and sexual arousal, countered by fear, guilt and morality. You weren't raped — part of you very much wanted what happened.

If your feelings of shame and self-hatred remain intense, and persistent, then you really should have strong second thoughts regarding another sexual experience, at least until you are "sure" of yourslef.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Surprise burn lotion's fault

By RENA PAUL

Dear Rena:

I used to get sunburned every year until I became more patient and learned to enjoy the summer sunshine for short periods at a time, adding a few minutes every day. It seemed I no longer needed to worry about sunburn once I acquire a suntan. The other day I took my even tan to the beach and spent the entire day at play in the sun. Well, I got the worst sunburn ever! How is this possible when I already had a tan and used my suntan lotion?

Lisa D.

Dear Lisa:

When you tan naturally, the sunlight reacts with substances in your skin to produce the colouring and slight thickening of the skin as a defence against the searing rays. Although this defence is often insufficient, it is completely absent in tanning lotion. Many people assume that these lotions contain sunscreen preparations, but, as far as I know they don't. I am sorry you had to learn this painful lesson, but I am very glad you wrote. Your letter might save somebody's skin. Even with a good tan, long exposure will cause a burn. Use a sunscreen preparation to reduce and block the sun's assault and maintain your good tan and good humor.

Dear Rena:

I have become more conscious of my neck. It seems to be dry and tired, and I'm concerned about what I may do to help this condition?

Grace B.

Dear Grace:

Many ladies either ignore or neglect the neck. Their beauty treatment seems to stop at the jaw bone. Let us go further. The skin tissues of the neck differs in texture and quality and will respond to specially designed neck creams. Seek out one of these neck creams and massage well into the neck area to the shoulders applying in long even strokes with in and outward movements. Be patient and consistent, and your efforts will be evident in the quality of your neck skin tissue.

Dear Rena:

I do not smoke, but it seems the rest of the world does. All day at the office I'm in a dry atmosphere of smoke and city pollutions. My eyes suffer the most. It looks like I have either a hangover or a broken heart, both of which are foreign to me. What can you suggest for my abused eyes?

Strained

Dear Strained:

I sympathize. As non-smokers, we seem to suffer the most. However, overuse of eyedrops is not a good idea, as damage to the eye and tearduct may result. One may use simple distilled water and apply from a dropper or small bottle. In addition when you are in private, lie down with wet tea bags over your eyes and rest and relax for 10-20 minutes. The effect is all too wonderful and completely natural as a soother to sore eyes. We might call this the gauze that refreshes!

Please send your questions to Rena Paul, c/o The Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. All queries will be answered confidentially, if stamped, self-addressed envelope is included.

OL' BLUE EYES was in Windsor, Ont., Monday for unveiling of Chrysler Canada's new luxury limousine, the Imperial. Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca turned over the keys to the silver, two-door car to entertainer Sinatra, seen here with wife, Barbara. The Imperial, expected to sell in Canada for about $22,000, is to be assembled entirely at Chrysler's facilities in Windsor. "I love it, I love it," Sinatra said as he drove the Imperial off an assembly line. Ford Motor Co., meanwhile, let a local union head drive the first of its new sub-compacts off the assembly line, John Barson, president of Local 900 of the United Auto Workers, Monday became first known union official to take roll-out honors.

Arctic team reaches goal

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — A team of three Canadian and three British kayakers attempting a daring trip around Baffin Island's Hall Peninsula, reached their goal of Allan Island Monday night.

"He's very happy, he's very happy," said Naudla Baril, after her husband, Peter, arrived at the major Inuit settlement.

The British members, Frank Goodman, Goodman's 23-year-old daughter Anna and Mike Madden are expected to fly back home.

The Inuit members of the team are expected back in Frobisher Bay within three or four days by boat.

Defence spending too costly — study

PORTLAND, Ont. (CP) — The costs of defence spending in Canada far outweigh the benefits, says a study commissioned by the United Nations.

Ernie Regehr, director of Canadian research on disarmament and development for the study, said the defence-production agreement between Canada and the United States leaves Canada at a disadvantage.

The Canadian defence industry is geared to producing components for American systems, he said, making Canada even more dependent on the U.S.

Regehr is a researcher at the Institute of Peace and Conflict Studies, Conrad Grebel College, at the University of Waterloo. He is also a director of Project Ploughshares, a national organization committed to ending the buildup of weapons by developed countries.

The Canadian study and 47 others were presented by the UN Centre for Disarmament to the fourth annual conference of Project Ploughshares, held last weekend on an island on Big Rideau Lake, 70 kilometres northeast of Kingston.

Travellers stranded by FAA decision

DES PLAINES, Ill. (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration is studying ways of picking up 21 travellers stranded in remote regions of Canada by the agency's decision to ground an Ely, Minn., air taxi firm.

The FAA's Great Lakes Region issued an emergency order Monday revoking the operating certificate of Wilderness Wings Airways for allegedly using unqualified pilots, not carrying required emergency equipment and failing to keep proper records.

An FAA spokesman said the agency was taking all available legal means to make certain the order would not strand the 21 travellers, mostly fishermen, flown into isolated Canadian wilderness recently by the air carrier.

The travelers were scheduled to be picked up between Wednesday and Saturday of this week.

The spokesman said there were three options: the air taxi could request a temporary operating certificate allowing it to pick up the travellers, with each flight approved in advance by the FAA; it could hire another airline to make the pickups, or it could seek aid from the RCMP.

Abortion study shows student ideas changing

OTTAWA (CP) — Young men and women have modified their attitudes about the conditions which might lead to legal abortion, a University of Toronto study shows.

A 1978 poll of 1,430 unmarried students at the university showed a decrease in the number of men and women who approve of legal abortions under six possible conditions of pregnancy.

But the survey by F. Michael Barrett of the university's zoology department found that students made a distinction between two different sets of conditions; the so-called emergency and non-emergency circumstances.

Students gave high approval to legal abortion in the cases of a pregnancy likely to harm the mother's physical health (93.9 per cent), pregnancy which might result in a deformed baby (79.4) and pregnancy resulting from rape (87.3). The results were virtually unchanged from the earlier polls which questioned attitudes on abortion under a variety of circumstances.

But Barrett found legal abortion was given decreased support for the other set of three conditions; child unwanted (51.1 per cent), economic reasons (47.9) and out of wedlock (50.8).

The survey showed that 36.7 per cent approved of abortion under the six possible conditions of pregnancy. This compares to 42.6 per cent of 1,420 students surveyed in 1974, 49.8 of 758 students in 1971 and 32.6 of 521 students in 1968.

Barrett, a researcher and teacher specializing in human physiology and sexuality, observed different attitudes in the students based on their sex, religion and sexual experience.

The decrease in support for all conditions was "not the result of greater blanket disapproval of abortion per se, but appear instead to have arisen from a decreased approval under specific conditions by specific sub-groups within the population."

"Catholic students made this distinction almost emphatically, Jewish and agnostic-atheist students least and Protestants in between," Barrett notes.

"Coitally-experienced unmarried students were significantly more approving of abortion under the three least-approved conditions than were their coitally-inexperienced counterparts."

Fewer men approved of abortion for the latter three circumstances, as well.

Barrett said the most common explanations for a "no" answer submitted by the students were that the baby could be put up for adoption and that abortion is not an acceptable method of birth control.

Students in this and the 1974 survey were asked whether there should be access to legal abortion if a pregnancy results despite conscientious use of birth control methods. About one-third of the students in both polls either disagreed or strongly disagreed.

In another as-yet-unpublished study of sexual education and experience in university students, he says about one in every 10 sexually-experienced unmarried students had had an abortion.

A recent study on sexual and contraceptive attitudes in high school and university women showed most strongly supported birth control but many did not use a contraceptive at first sexual experience,

Custard caper cancer fighter

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Terry Fox, more than halfway into his cross-country run for cancer research, left the Lake Huron community of Desbarats on Monday about the same time Freddie Sless of Hamilton was sleeping off his bout with a vat of custard.

Fox, 22, who lost his right leg to cancer three years ago, has raised about $1.4 million so far and $912 of it came from the custard caper in Hamilton.

Sless, 50, spent 51 hours and 35 minutes during the weekend wallowing in a vat of lemon-banana custard, a stay cut short by about 8½ hours because the custard turned green — along with Freddie's gills.

"I didn't notice the smell of the custard at first, but I was starting to get hazy," Sless said. "People were commenting, 'My God, what an odor,' and I just kept getting drowsy and hungry."

Famine got the best of Sless on Sunday and he wolfed down some hamburgers, bringing on stomach cramps so severe he had to leave his electrically-heated vat parked on a Dundurn Street car lot.

Meanwhile, Fox was expected to arrive sometime this afternoon in Sault Ste. Marie, where he is to guest of honor at a civic reception.

Gov't seeking new fiscal watchdog

OTTAWA (CP) — A new auditor general — the influential guardian of the public purse — tops the list of senior posts which the federal government wants urgently filled, probably by early fall.

J.J. Macdonell, who became auditor general in 1973, had planned to retire early in June, but is staying until mid-September when he turns 65. The job pays $62,000.

Federal officials say an urgent search is also on for three other senior jobs, which in one case has been vacant for eight months. Officials say the government expects to select the candidates within the next two months. They include:

— Chief statistician of Statistics Canada, with a salary between $53,100 and $$71,700, to replace Peter Kirkham who resigned in late March. Late last year, the government hired outside consultants to investigate criticisms about the agency's management and statistical performance.

— Chairman of the National Energy Board, with a salary between $69,000 and $79,300, to replace Jack Stabback who resigned in May to work in the petroleum industry.

— Chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, with a salary between $69,000 and $79,300, to replace Sylvia Ostry who resigned last December to join the Paris-based Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

An internal committee established by Treasury Board President Donald Johnston to select a new auditor general has received recommendations from the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. But the final decision is made by order-in-council.

Other vacancies include chairman of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency, a post which has been open since last October when Murray McBride, who earned $45,000 a year, resigned.

During the search for full-time appointments, the posts are filled on an interim basis by other officials who are usually vice-chairmen of the respective agencies.

Hooker horde forces closure

VANCOUVER (CP) — The prostitution problem is so bad at a downtown intersection that a hotel has ceased evening operation of its dining room.

Dal Richards, Devonshire Hotel general manager, said hookers and potential clients roaming the intersection of Georgia and Hornby streets has forced closure of the restaurant at 6 p.m. because of complaints from customers.

A number of Devonshire customers signed form letters to formally complain about the problem, and Richards said copies of the letters are being sent to Mayor Jack Volrich, Police Chief Don Winterton and the local visitors' bureau.

CP's profit climbs to $269.2M

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific Ltd. reported Monday that its consolidated net income for the first six months of 1980 climbed to $269.2 million, or $3.74 a share, an increase of 60 cents a share from $226.3 million in the same period last year.

The group attributed the increase to its shipping subsidiary, Canadian Pacific (Bermuda) Ltd., and to Soo Line Railroad Co., which recorded net income of $21.1 million and $9.6 million respectively.

The Bermuda subsidiary's good showing was attributed to higher earnings by dry bulk carriers, and increased coal, grain and ore shipments.

CP Trucks suffered a loss of $2.1 million, reflecting the "effects on CP Transport of severe competition for available traffic and of higher costs."

CP Air lost $8 million, compared with a $2.1-million profit in the same period of 1979.

"The deterioration was the result of higher costs, particularly for jet fuel and labor, which exceed the additional revenues generated by both improved passenger yields and increased passenger traffic," Canadian Pacific said.

CP Rail's income dropped $4 million to $42 million because of the "deepening economic recession which adversely affected growth in freight revenue."

Canadian Pacific's share of net income from Canadian Pacific Enterprises Ltd. climbed to $270 million from $226.3 million, due to increased oil and gas, forest products and investment income.

Dillingham Corporation Canada Ltd. of North Vancouver submitted a bid of $871,143, the lowest of six.

The highest bid — $3,836,526 — came from Comex Services of Marseilles, France.

Other bids: Peter Kiewit Sons Co. Ltd. of Richmond, $1,640,000; Seatec International Ltd. of Gloucester, Mass., $1,094,889; Tidewater Marine Contracting Ltd. of Duncan, $1,195,706, and H.B. Contracting Ltd. of Surrey, $2,189,800.

The tenders will be studied by Capital Regional District's consultants.

Cost of the outfall will be shared three ways with Oak Bay paying 38 per cent, Saanich eight per cent and Victoria the rest.

The regional board has already approved the expenditure of $51,600 for the 42-inch steel pipe which will be purchased from Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corp. Ltd. and an additional $38,500 for coating and lining the pipe with primer and coal tar enamel by Shaw Pipe Protection (Alberta) Ltd.

It is also estimated $200,000 will be needed for a comminutor station and beautification.

There will be $300,000 in engineering consultant fees.

College needs space early

Camosun College, already occupying part of the administrative area in School District 61's Paul building, wants to take over more space three months ahead of schedule.

The school board planned to be out of the building, bought by Camosun, by September, 1981, when a new school administrative centre in the former Tolmie Elementary School should be renovated.

But Camosun hopes renovations to the Paul building can be started in May, allowing it to use the new facility in September.

School planner Bob Yates said if reconstruction of Tolmie goes according to schedule it might be possible to move some administrative functions there in time to allow an earlier start at the Paul building by Camosun.

Crash kills Victorian

BROOKS, Alta. (CP) — Police have identified a man who died Monday in a head-on collision near Brooks, Alta. about 160 kilometres southeast of Calgary.

Police say Thomas Harold Brown, 64, of Victoria, was the lone occupant of an eastbound car on the Trans-Canada Highway when it collided with a westbound car driven by Einer Erick Johnson, 75, of Didsbury, Alta.

Bank plans court appeal

NELSON (CP) — The Toronto-Dominion Bank served notice Monday it is appealing a provincial court decision which ruled the bank had broken its own credit card contract and overcharged a local lawyer.

The case, launched by Nelson lawyer Nils Jensen after he felt he had been overcharged $8.61 in interest over six months, could effect many other credit card holders. Judge L.J. Keffer found the bank guilty of misinterpreting its credit card contract.

The bank says in its appeal notice that Judge Keffer erred in fact and in law in his decision.

Jensen said the bank is very concerned about the judgment. "People on the street are saying: 'It is good to hear someone finally taking the banks to task.'"

Jensen's victory in the B.C. provincial court attracted national attention. He said he sued personally on a point of principle. He got back his $8.61 with one per cent interest.

The lawyer said he had made his payments promptly but the bank did not credit his account until two weeks after each payment.

Million-ton deal for B.C. coal

TOKYO (UPI) — A group of major Japanese steel mills has reached basic agreement with a Canadian mining firm to import one million tons of coal annually from B.C. starting in 1983, industry officials said Monday.

They said the agreement with Crows Nest Resources, a division of Shell Canada Resources, is part of an industry effort to diversify coal import sources and had been negotiated since last year.

Festival an opportunity for discoveries

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Over the past few weeks Victoria International Festival has brought its audiences major and frequently familiar works in the classical repertoire — the Beethoven 'Archduke' Trio, Brahms Double Concerto, Piano Trio and Piano Concerto No. 1, Vivaldi's Four Seasons, Bach Brandenburg Concertos, Ravel's La Valse and Tzigane, and much more.

But the most recent festival programs have provided the opportunity to make new musical discoveries as well; discoveries of singular interest and enchanting quality. Seldom, for instance, is it possible to hear the Poulenc Sonata for clarinet and bassoon or his Trio for piano, oboe and bassoon; or the splendid Prokofiev Sonata for Violin in F minor.

All three of these works turned up in Sunday's concert at McPherson Playhouse to reward one of the festival's smaller but dedicated audiences.

Then there was the "missing Mozart F Major bassoon concerto" performed at Monday's concerto extravaganza concert by George Zukerman with the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra.

It seems, according to a program note by Zukerman, the concerto is not after all by Mozart but probably by another composer, Franz Danzi, whose life overlapped Mozart's and who wrote several bassoon concerti.

Never mind, the work was buoyant, graceful and brilliant and played with great humor and panache by the celebrated bassoonist.

The Poulenc Sonate received perceptive and fluent treatment from Zukerman with clarinetist Gervase de Peyer; the Romance movement containing a haunting lyricism, the finale, dazzlingly virtuosic. With the remarkably sensitive and glowing pianist, Mitchell Andrews joining renowned oboist Bert Lucarelli and Zukerman, the Trio was another example of superb interpretation.

So also was the authoritative performance by Dana Pomerantz-Mazurkeyich with Andrews, of the Prokofiev violin sonata.

The first half of Monday's concert was devoted to an outstanding performance of Pergolesi's rich and moving Stabat Mater. The orchestra conducted by William Shookhoff, played exceptionally well, revealing a high degree of refinement and precision in accompanying the two singers — soprano Patricia Fournier and mezzo Dorothy Jean Lloyd.

These young artists are members of the Opera Centre of the Johannesen International School. Both possess fine voices and are technically assured. The blend in the duet parts was quite beautiful and the whole work well deserved the reaction of Monday's large audience.

A long and ecstatic ovation acknowledged violinist Jean-Jacques Kantorow's expressive performance of the Beethoven Concerto in D Major. The wonderfully delicate and rapid trills, the exquisite harmonics and sensitive bowing, the sheer brio that flared throughout virtuosic passages, made this final festival performance by the artist, also one of the most memorable.

They seemed to dance all night

By DEBRA CRAINE

VANCOUVER (CP) — In the end, it was all just too much of a good thing.

For more than three hours Sunday night, a full house at Queen Elizabeth Theatre was treated to what could only be described as a dance extravaganza.

Dance, Dance, Dance, an ambitious program of 13 works featuring 11 internationally-known artists, contained some splendid dancing. But it was hard to appreciate all of it — at times the evening took on the quality of a marathon.

The lavish production was created by Vancouver dance impresario David Y. H. Lui to honor the 75th anniversary of the founding of the province of Alberta.

Commissioned by the Alberta government, the show had just finished a tour of smaller communities in the province. Sunday night's performance was the only one outside Alberta.

Appropriately, two Canadians stood out among the wealth of talent — one from the National Ballet of Canada, the other from the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

It was likely the last chance for some time for Vancouver balletomanes to see Frank Augustyn, principal dancer with the Toronto-based National Ballet. He leaves soon for West Germany and a year with the Berlin Opera Ballet.

But it was a sparkling farewell — in three different works.

In Personal Essay, he stood alone on stage as his recorded voice told of the fears and excitement he experienced before the curtain went up. Then a strong and assured Augustyn began to dance Hans Van Manen's Four Schumann Pieces as the recording revealed his thoughts.

In Maurice Bejart's Song of a Wayfarer he teamed with fellow National principal dancer Tomas Schramek in an excellent performance of the powerful modern statement on destiny and suffering.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

It might seem that if the number of losers declarer has is added to the number of winners he has, they ought to add up to thirteen. However, sometimes they don't.

Consider this case where declarer is in four spades. West leads the king of clubs, which wins, and then the queen of clubs, taken by South with the ace.

Declarer counts his losers and they appear to be one club, two diamonds and one or two trump tricks. This would lead to down one or two if the East-West cards are divided as expected. But actually South's prospects are much better than that.

After declarer wins the queen of clubs, he plays the A-K of trumps, learning that the suit is divided 4-1, which is not surprising in view of West's bidding. This development confirms that South has five losers, but does not necessarily mean that all is lost.

Declarer continues by cashing the A-K of hearts and ruffing a heart. He then proceeds merrily along by trumping a club in dummy, ruffing another heart, and next playing a diamond to the ace and ruffing dummy's last heart.

The effect of all these movements back and forth is that South by this time has accumulated ten tricks consisting of the A-K of spades, A-K of hearts, ace of diamonds and ace of clubs, plus three heart ruffs in his own hand and a club ruff in dummy.

It is true that South had five losers and somehow reduced them to three — since he finished with ten tricks despite the five losers. The explanation of this anomaly is that, after eleven tricks had been played, South's Q-9 of diamonds simultaneously succumbed to West's K-J of diamonds and East's Q-J of trumps. Four of his theoretical losers were thus telescoped into two actual losers — and this merger of four losers into two allowed South to score ten tricks.

309 IN MEMORIAM

ROE-In loving memory of our daughter Phyllis, who passed away August 12, 1950, age 7½.
30 years have passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
Good took her home-it was His will;
Within our hearts she liveth still.
Ever remembered by Mom and Dad.

STANDEN-In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Opal Marie Standen who passed away Aug. 1973. Sadly missed by Dad, Glen (Mary Lori) and Peggy.
Our life cannot speak, how we loved her
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
God only knows how we miss her,
As we journey along lifes way.

'Squirrelly' season at hand

This can be a somewhat hectic time of year for those of us who dabble to any extent in vegetable gardening — and the numbers of such dabblers have increased mightily during the last three or four years. But whenever we find ourselves complaining about all the work involved in the harvesting and processing of our backyard produce, we should remember that after all it is the ultimate goal of those who hopefully plunk seeds into the ground each spring.

In fact, the rewards can be most satisfying and help to ease the weeks of occasional hard labor and frequent picky chores. The peak picking season is what I refer to as my yearly "squirrelly" season. There certainly seems to be something instinctive about the compulsive gathering, packaging and "squirrelling" away of foods for the winter months.

It is only natural that many home gardeners who like to grow their own food also like to preserve it for maximum nutrition and attractiveness. For this reason, one good rule to follow is to gather only small batches at a time, cleaning and processing each small batch right away.

I have found that for many vegetables and fruits the garden hose is the quickest and most efficient cleaning tool. Just attach the spray nozzle and turn on the water full blast. This cleaning method is particularly effective for broccoli and cauliflower. Once the pieces are cut for freezing, turn the hose on each piece to dislodge any lurking visitors which, while they might add some protein to your diet, do nothing for the appetite if discovered on the plate.

This quick spray method is vastly preferable to soaking the vegetables because so many of the desired vitamins are water soluble. Carrots also come wonderfully clean, as do beets, new potatoes and other root vegetables, under this spray method. Just put the root vegetables in some perforated container so the water can run out and turn the jet of water on them full blast.

Once the vegetables are clean, try to avoid peeling them. It has been my experience over the years that fresh from the garden, my vegetables only rarely need to have this nutritious coating removed.

Haste in this case doesn't make waste in my view. With the ultimate in nutritional value in mind, I cut and process the vegetables just as quickly as possible. And I always steam ours because the steaming preserves color, taste and vitamins while dumping the food in boiling water leaches these things out, negating the advantages we home gardeners enjoy. I look upon our enamel steamers as just about the best investments we have made towards family health.

Almost all steamers come with charts indicating the steam-blanching times for each vegetable. However, if you do not have such a steam-blanching chart, simply add a minute or two to the boiling-water blanching time.

Once the vegetables are steam-blanched, I turn them out from the steamer on to those re-usable ice packs generally used for picnic coolers that you can buy in the supermarkets. These ice packs come in various sizes and shapes and are kept frozen for use in a corner of the deep freeze or in the freezer portion of the fridge. They come in very handy to quick-cool my steamed vegetables in preparation for freezing.

Again, this method is preferable to my way of thinking because dumping the food into cold water will tend to leach out the good things in the vegetables.

Around our place, one of the favorite home-frozen vegetables is peas. While the store-bought ones aren't all that bad, they can't hold a candle to the ones we pluck fresh from the backyard garden, swiftly process and rush to the freezer.

In processing these, I place whole branches of mint in the bottom of the steamer, in the water. The lovely mint flavor and aroma goes into the peas with the steam, at the same time filling the house with its wonderful scent.

Each time during the winter that we open a package of our peas, memories of summer come back with that lovely minty fragrance. I'll be continuing this discussion on processing in tomorrow's column.

Thai children sold on slave market

GENEVA (AP) — Thousands of Thai children are bought and sold each year on a professionally-operated market that supplies factories, brothels and massage parlors in Thailand with slave children, a United Nations human rights group was told today.

"Every day, girls as young as 11 or 12 years of age are being sold into brothels," said British social worker Timothy Bond. He told the UN Working Group on Slavery that he collected detailed evidence on the market during a five-month welfare mission in Thailand.

His report, presented on behalf of the London-based Minority Rights Group, said that children are sold for between 150 and 1,000 baht, ($7.50 to $50), "depending upon his or her age, strength and beauty."

He said he bought two boys, 12 and 13 years old, for 700 baht, or $35, from a professional child trader and then returned them to their home village.

"I still have the receipt and the sales contract," he added.

In the Bangkok railway station, a central trading point, more than 500 children are sold each week during dry season between November and April, he said.

The children are brought from northeastern Thailand by professional "child catchers" or by parents and relatives in search of "quick money," he said. The northeast is the poorest part of the country because the short monsoon season allows farmers to harvest only one rice crop each year, he said.

Bond told the working group that Thai police fail to enforce laws banning such sales and charged they are either bribed into silence or given free access to girls sold to brothels.

One way to fight the practice would be a UN program to fight poverty in Thailand through irrigation and development of local industries, Bond suggested.

Children brainwashed by Kabul government

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The Soviet-installed regime is brainwashing Afghan children with threats, beatings and political indoctrination until they swear to support the government, a former Afghan official charged.

The official said Monday his own son had been arrested and imprisoned for 23 days for participating in a shouting demonstration at a school six weeks ago against Afghan president Babrak Karmal's Parchamite faction.

"The new approach of (the president's) Parchamities is to arrest young students and boys between the ages of 13 and 21 in batches of 200 to 300 for a short period of 20 to 25 days," he said.

"During that time, they are subjected to threats, brainwashing and in a few cases physical violence.

"Many of these boys apparently fall in line by giving written assurances that they would not participate in anti-government movements and would inform on others if aproached to do so," he said.

The official, interviewed in New Dehli, said he did want to be identified because he was planning to return to Afghanistan.

He said new divisions within Karmal's Communist Party over the issues of law and order and the presence of Soviet troops have further weakened his government.

One faction, including Karmal supporters, insists the Afghan government which came to power with the Soviet invasion in December should have authority to interpret and apply Afghan laws and those of the People's Democratic Party.

A second group, calling itself nationalist, has publicly criticized Karmal for conducting a lawless state, saying he had identified his Parchamite followers in a series of murders and crimes against the Afghan people.

Warsaw workers walk off their jobs

WARSAW (AP) — A strike by workers in three of Warsaw's 10 bus depots entered its second day today and workers in about 200 factories in other cities in this Communist country walked out to demand higher wages, dissident sources said.

Although the bus drivers' strike closed only a third of the Warsaw depots, most of the city's bus drivers stayed home and the city was virtually without transportation, the sources said.

"Auxiliary drivers" operated several buses, and asked passengers to show them the regular routes, the sources said.

The strike began about mid-day Monday, but has been ignored by the state-controlled media.

The workers are demanding higher wages and improved management practices, and are protesting a shortage of meat and other foods, the sources said.

The dissidents had few details about the strikes in other Polish cities.

The transportation workers strike in Warsaw began two days after the city granted a $33 a month wage increase to sanitation workers, ending a six-day walkout Saturday, the sources said. Garbage collectors now earn between $150 and $180 a month.

The average wage in Poland is $170 per month.

In another strike-related development, Polish authorities released a leader of the striking garbage men one day after his arrest. Marek Glesmann was the first member of a strike committee to be arrested since labor unrest broke out last month in Poland.

Nuclear blast suggested

GENEVA (Reuter) — Dr. Sigvard Eklund, director-general of the International Atomic Energy Agency, proposed Monday a demonstration explosion of a nuclear weapon to create a massive world reaction against such devices.

Eklund made his proposal at the opening session of the United Nations conference to review success in implementing the 1968 Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty.

He said there is "global overkill" capacity in 50,000 nuclear weapons with a combined explosive power equivalent to more than a million of the bombs dropped on the Japanese city of Hiroshima in 1945.

"How I wish that in a way consistent with the limited test-ban treaty the nuclear weapon powers would arrange a demonstration explosion of a weapon — not necessarily the most sophisticated one from their point of view — to give the news media the world over an idea of the destructive power of the new nuclear weapons," he told the conference.

He said nuclear weapons now in existence represent not less than three tons of TNT for every individual in the world.

"In spite of this global overkill capacity the nuclear weapon powers are continually increasing their nuclear arsenals and improving their lethalness and effectiveness."

He said 53 nuclear tests were carried out in 1979, bringing to 420 the number of tests by the five nuclear-weapon states — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — in the last decade.

Five countries outside the treaty are operating unsafeguarded nuclear facilities and there are reports that one or more of them have acquired nuclear weapons, he said.

In a message to the conference, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said his country would never use nuclear weapons against countries which renounced the production or acquisition of such weapons and had none on their territories.

He added that Moscow is willing to share its experience and technology with any countries using the atom for peaceful purposes.

The conference will examine ways to strengthen international safeguards over the growth of nuclear technology around the world to prevent the emergence of more nuclear weapon states.

But the two major nuclear powers will also come under strong pressure to make substantive progress on nuclear disarmament, a goal they have failed to realize since the treaty signing.

The treaty has so far been signed and ratified by 114 nations, but not by such nuclear weapon "threshold" states as Argentina, Brazil, Israel, Egypt, India, Pakistan and South Africa.

Of the world's five nuclear weapon powers, only China and France have refused to sign the treaty.

The terms of the treaty prohibit nuclear powers from passing on nuclear weapons technology to others while the nuclear have-nots pledge not to acquire atomic arms of their own.

Stop weapons spread: Carter

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — President Carter warned today that the spread of nuclear weapons has brought the world closer to a devastating nuclear conflict.

He issued the warning in a message to the U.N.-sponsored conference to review operation of the 10-year-old Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty designed to prevent a spread of atomic weapons.

Carter said the Non-Proliferation Treaty "remains indispensable to the efforts... to achieve a safer, saner, and more secure world."

"The acquisition of nuclear explosives by additional states would decrease the security of the states acquiring them, decrease the stability of the regions in which they are located, and increase the risk of nuclear conflict," he said.

Carter called for vigorous pursuit of efforts to curb the nuclear arms race.

"This goal — already difficult to achieve — could be rendered unattainable if the number of states with nuclear weapons were to increase," he said.

Carter said the United States will continue to help other nations in obtaining the benefits of nuclear power for peaceful purposes but only if there are assurances that such cooperation will not be misused for military purposes.

The president's message was read to the conference by chief U.S. delegate Ralph Earle II, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

U.S. changing strategy

By MICHAEL GETLER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter has signed a new directive that modifies the strategy the United States would use in fighting a nuclear war with the Soviet Union, according to high-ranking administration officials.

The new strategy involves placing less emphasis on all-out retaliation against Soviet cities in the event of Russian attack. Instead, there is to be greater emphasis on destroying Soviet military forces and both political and military command centres early in a conflict in hopes of convincing Moscow that it could not ultimately "win" a war.

Presidential directives on such matters are milestones in the 35-year history of the atomic age. They have an important and immediate impact on U.S. military policy and thinking.

Presidential directive No. 59 is understood to have been signed within the past two weeks by the president after being developed by the staff of the National Security Council and top military and civilian defense officials.

The idea behind the shift in strategy actually is not new, having evolved over several years.

What is new, however, is that there is now an updated presidential directive in force.

And, it comes at a time when the United States has the beginnings of more accurate new weapons and soon will have better ways to control and target them than it did six years ago, officials say. This makes the strategy more feasible now, they claim.

Several factors went into the new directive, these officials explain.

For much of the past two decades, the United States has relied on a strategy of having enough nuclear might to smash all major Russian cities and industries, even after absorbing a first strike by Moscow, so that the Soviets would be deterred from such an attack in the first place.

This was called by the appropriate acronym of Mad, for mutual assured destruction. It still is a major part of U.S. strategy.

As the Soviet missile force grew larger than the U.S. force and as its accuracy improved, the Soviets could threaten not only U.S. cities but U.S. land-based missiles as well.

Furthermore, an appreciation grew among some specialists in this country that Soviet military doctrine did not necessarily accept the idea that a nuclear war could have no winners.

Thus, it is reasoned here, that no matter how a nuclear war starts, the Soviets still may think that with their large atomic and conventional forces, and civil defense program, they could carry on longer than the West, and therefore reap some spoils.

Under the new strategy, the United States might no longer just fire a warning shot or an all-out salvo. Rather it might try to quickly destroy tank divisions, military command centers and perhaps underground shelters housing civilian leaders in the immediate attack region to show that the thrust of the U.S. response will not be just to kill Soviets but to prevent military victory.

The United States, officials say, always has been able to hit some military targets, but is now in a better position to do this because new, more accurate weapons, such as the Navy's new Trident I submarine-launched missile, are now entering service.

In order to carry out this new strategy with any precision or success, the United States would have to know where the likely targets are in the midst of undoubted chaos.

Spy's motive altruistic?

MOSCOW (UPI) — In a rare interview published Saturday, British masterspy Kim Philby said he became a Soviet double-agent to serve "my own English people... and the great movement, communism."

Philby, the so-called "Third Man" in one of Britain's most infamous spy scandals, was interviewed in his Moscow apartment by the Soviet weekly Nedelya.

Now 65 and a colonel in the KGB, Philby offered no new information about the espionage scandal that rocked the world in the 1950s but his comments did offer some light on his reasons for turning into a double agent.

Going back to his youth as a student, Philby said he found himself in a pre-war Europe racked with unemployment, oppression of the working masses and the emergence of fascism.

"I desperately sought the means to be useful to the great movement of the time, whose name was communism," he said.

"The realization of these ideas is the Soviet Union and its heroic people, which has laid the foundation of construction of a new world.

"I considered, and still consider now, that by this work, I also served my own English people," he said.

Philby was the notorious "Third Man" who tipped off Soviet double agents Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean that they were about to be arrested in 1951. They also escaped to Moscow.

Iran's PM to form gov't fast

The Associated Press

Iran's new hardline prime minister, Mohammad Ali Rajaie, said he should be able to form his cabinet in 10 days, removing the last obstacle to parliamentary debate on the U.S. hostages.

But he indicated no softening in attitude toward the 52 hostages, who spent their 283rd day in captivity today, saying his government will give unbending loyalty to Ayatollah Khomeini.

Rajaie told reporters after receiving the approval Monday from the parliament, or Majlis, that under the constitution he has 10 days to form and introduce his cabinet and that this period will be sufficient.

The Majlis, which meets again Saturday, must approve the cabinet just as it did Rajaie, and little opposition is expected.

"In forming the cabinet, I would seek assistance and co-operation from all revolutionary foundations and rely on these institutions," the official Pars news agency quoted Rajaie as saying.

He said so far he has not chosen any cabinet member, but that the criteria for such selection will be those stressed by Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader and Shiite Moslem patriarch who has said the hostage debate cannot begin until a government is installed.

"The only condition I add is that a person who is appointed should accept the religious leadership of the Imam," Rajaie said. "In the private session of the Majlis this morning, I talked briefly about my programs and policies and said that I follow the Imam and this would mark one of the characteristics of my government."

He said President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr — pressed into nominating Rajaie by the Moslem fundamentalists who dominate the Majlis — "has no opinion on the selection of the cabinet ministers and has given me freedom of action in this respect."

Rajaie is a former high school teacher, who during his brief tenure as education minister launched a purge of Western influences from the Iranian school system. Up to now he has had little experience in government affairs.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A guide to committing suicide will soon be available to terminally ill individuals who want to take their own lives.

An organization called Hemlock says it will publish a booklet presenting a number of case histories of "voluntary active euthanasia" — where terminally ill persons, often with the help of family and friends, commit suicide.

The group formed last month says it will not be a guide to suicide as such, but included in the accounts will be details of the methods used, including choices of drugs and dosages.

Chinese try to bury Mao cult

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese Communist party delivered yet another slap at the memory of Mao Tse-tung on Monday, declaring there were too many portraits, quotations and poems of the late party chairman in public places.

China should "sing more praises of the workers, peasants and soldiers . . . while giving less publicity to individuals," the party's policy-making central committee said in putting a virtual ban on the cult of personality in China.

The directive limits the publishing of biographies and collected writings of top leaders, and the reporting of their activities and speeches. It says no halls, pavilions or monuments are to be built in memory of individual veteran revolutionaries, and orders those under construction or finished to be turned into social, economic or cultural institutions.

The committee singled out Mao by name and said the public glorification of the longtime chairman, who died in 1976, was "lacking in political dignity."

Two weeks ago, huge portraits of Mao on Peking's Great Hall of the People and on the Tien An Men museum were removed.

Giant panda delivers cub

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A giant panda in Chapultepec Zoo has given birth to the first panda cub born naturally in captivity, zoo officials announced today.

Dr. Juan Tellez Giron, a veterinary surgeon, said the mother, Ying Ying, had a normal delivery Monday after a gestation period of between 118 and 168 days. Veterinarians watched the birth of the 99-gram cub on closed-circuit television.

Zoos in Washington, D.C., Tokyo and London have sought unsuccessfully to mate pairs of giant pandas.

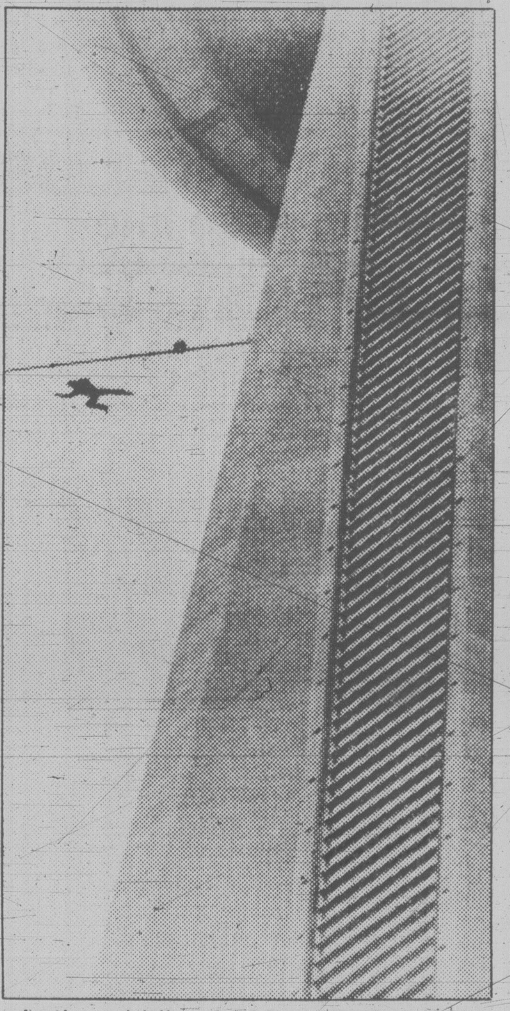
300 metres and no chute



In the middle of 300-metre free fall

TORONTO (CP) — Dar Robinson placed his feet safely on the ground after a successful jump of almost 300 metres from the CN Tower today and told a crowd of onlookers "I was 33 but now I'm 50."

"Does this show you how I feel?" he asked, extending a shaky hand to a group of schoolchildren and reporters.

Robinson, 33, who completed the stunt for a one-hour, ABC-TV program to be aired in October, executed a free-fall for more than two-thirds of the way down, held only by a wire cable attached to his waist and to a braking device controlled by engineers on the roof of the tower's sky pod.

His arms and legs swung wildly and he let out a couple of yells before the cable stopped him about 60 metres short of the ground and he was slowly lowered to safety.

"All I could hear when I looked down was my heart thumping and the wind whistling. You have to completely divorce yourself from all emotion and think purely of technical things."

The California resident, who has performed such stunts as a free fall from the top of the Houston Astrodome onto an air bag, said between sips from a bottle of champagne that he had no sensation of falling when he first stepped off the platform.

Robinson had planned to jump last Thursday but a defect in his equipment — which he designed for about $8,000 — caused a delay until Monday. That attempt was cancelled when wind speed rose above Robinson's acceptable level of 30 kilomeres an hour.

Despite good weather conditions today and two backup systems, Robinson said he risked several serious problems.

A lack of aerodynamic control could have caused him to spin and become entangled in the cable and a sudden gust of wind could have propelled him into the side of the tower. Also, he was falling at a speed of about 190 kilometres an hour, making his 170-pound weight about 10 times that number and creating a stress that risked snapping the wire.

Canada no longer leader in jobless

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — For the first time in three years, Canada today shed the unhappy distinction of reporting the highest unemployment rate in the western world.

Figures released this morning show the jobless rate fell in July to 7.6 per cent, from its June level of 7.8 per cent. Although the numerical drop was small, it was important from a psychological standpoint. It allowed Canada to drop into second place in the world ranking, behind the United States which reported a July unemployment rate of 7.8 per cent. Canada has persistently reported the worst unemployment rate in the industrial world since 1977.

Officials at Statistics Canada warned that the country could soon be back in first place. "We've been above the U.S. for most of the year and this could very well be a temporary change," said a spokesman for the agency.

Canada is still reporting a far higher unemployment rate than most European nations and Japan. Latest available international statistics — covering the first three months of the years — show unemployment rates of 1.9 per cent in Japan, 6.3 per cent in France, 3.1 per cent in West Germany, 6.0 per cent in Italy, 6.2 per cent in Britain and 1.8 per cent in Sweden (The British figure has climbed rapidly since these figures were published and is hovering close to seven per cent).

There were 852,000 Canadians officially out of work last month, compared to a June figure of 887,000. This was the fourth consecutive monthly decrease.

In British Columbia the rate fell to 6.6 per cent, in Manitoba to 5.4 per cent and in Quebec to 9.9 per cent.

There were larger decreases in Ontario where it slipped to 6.9 per cent from 7.5 per cent. In Alberta, where unemployment is lower than all the other provinces, the rate dropped to 3.7 per cent from four per cent.

However, serious pockets of unemployment remain throughout the country. Windsor, the city hardest-hit by the slump in the auto industry reported an unemployment rate of 12.7 per cent last month, the highest for any Canadian city. Residents of that city say the real rate is closer to 20 per cent. Some workers still believe they are on temporary lay-off and others are have become so discouraged that they have stopped looking

Study urges crackdown on welfare

An internal report leaked to the NDP calls for a crackdown on welfare fraud by forcing single parents back to work.

The report recommends unexpected spot checks of homes and refusal to replace a recipient's lost or stolen money.

The staff report to a senior official in the human resources ministry says too many social workers "let their hearts rule their thinking" and instead they should stress accountability in the handling of public funds.

Outside the house she cited the recommendations as proof of the provincial government's "preoccupation with an assault on the dignity of people."

The report from Roy Johnson, human resources co-ordinator, to Sam Travers, executive director of general administration, also recommends:

—Rotating the caseload of the ministry's financial aid workers "to avoid too much favoritism;"

—Refusing to provide more than minimal temporary assistance to anyone who can't produce identification;

—Checking with employers of welfare recipients with part-time jobs to confirm earnings and to learn whether full-time work is available.

Johnson says in his May 28 report that his findings are meant to be constructive criticism without attempting to take into account the social problems influencing the potential abuse of welfare money.

"We must recognize the fact that all applicants are not honest and the system is so easy to beat if we continue to accept all statements without some measure of verification," the report says.

"Some of our people tend to try too hard to prove the clients' eligibility instead of placing the onus on them."

Johnson says single parents, who are classed as unemployable by human resources policy, are "a real drain on the system and, in many cases, wrought with fraud."

He recommends that B.C. adopt a position similar to Alberta, where single parents would be retrained for work and some child care provided.

Mrs. Brown said the report unfairly steroetyped welfare recipients as dishonest people.

Canadians keeping spirits up

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians consumed 2.36 billion litres of alcohol during the year ending March, 1979 — about 100 litres a person, although it varies by province.

The cost of all that alcohol is $1.37 billion — about $185 a person

Figures released by Statistics Canada Monday showed that the volume of spirits, wine and beer consumed is about the same as the year ended March 31, 1978.

The cost, however, has increased by nine per cent.

Strikes by brewery workers in Manitoba, British Columbia and Alberta helped keep the volume of sales at the same level as the year before, the federal statistics agency said.

In both Manitoba and British Columbia the sales volume of alcohol dropped by about 11 per cent. Sales in Alberta changed only fractionally. During the year Manitobans bought an average of 77 litres each, those in B.C. and Alberta about 95 litres each.

Carter wooing Kennedy

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

NEW YORK — President Jimmy Carter, assured of the Democratic presidential nomination, today began seeking the support of challenger Edward Kennedy hours after the Massachussetts Senator withdrew from the Democratic Party race.

Kennedy conceded the nomination after Democrats defeated a bid Monday night to "open" the party's 38th national convention, a move that would have freed delegates from voting pledges made during spring primary elections. Delegates voted 1936 to 1390 to reject Kennedy's effort to open the convention, and thus cleared the way for Carter's nomination Wednesday night.

"President Carter's forces have won an impressive victory," Kennedy told tearful supporters at his Waldorf Astoria hotel headquarters.

"I am a realist and I know what this means. . . . My name will not be placed in nomination."

The surprise announcement signalled the end of Kennedy's nine-month, uphill fight to wrest the nomination from Carter.

Almost immediately, Carter and Kennedy aides began negotiations on a deal that would allow the Democrats to emerge united from this week's convention.

Kennedy pledged to continue his fight to liberalize the Democratic party platform, which will be debated today. But whether the Carter campaign is ready to make concessions on the platform is not clear.

Gov't to appeal helmet ruling

The provincial government will appeal Monday's provincial court ruling in Vancouver that motorcyclists are not required to wear helmets.

The decision to take the case to the B.C. Supreme Court instead of attempting to enforce the helmet rule by cabinet order, was announced today by Transport Minister Alex Fraser.

He estimated a delay of three to six months before the case comes to court.

In the meantime, motorcyclists in B.C. will be able to ride bareheaded.

The attorney-general's office has instructed B.C. police forces to stop laying charges against cyclists who ride without helmets.

Judge Cyril Woodliffe ruled that the act does not give the superintendent of motor vehicles the authority to regulate the use of helmets. This authority lies with the B.C. cabinet, he said.

Fraser said as far as he is concerned, motorcyclists should wear helmets regardless of the law.

"I'm certainly in favor of making it mandatory to wear helmets," he said.

Neil McDiarmid, assistant deputy attorney-general, said the department will be considering either an appeal of the decision or a recommendation that the act be amended.

"Our hope is that the more responsible motorcyclist will continue wearing helmets as a good safety measure," McDiarmid said.

"If they chose not to wear them, we can only regret that they took that choice."

Dwight Currie, a 33-year-old machinist, was ecstatic after the judge dismissed three charges against him of riding a motorcycle without an approved helmet. When he was charged, Currie was wearing an imitation 1914 leather helmet.

Currie said he will no longer be wearing a helmet.

His lawyer, Jim McNeney, who also rides a motorcycle, said he will decide whether to wear a helmet depending on the circumstances surrounding his ride.

'Squirrelly' season at hand

This can be a somewhat hectic time of year for those of us who dabble to any extent in vegetable gardening — and the numbers of such dabblers have increased mightily during the last three or four years. But whenever we find ourselves complaining about all the work involved in the harvesting and processing of our backyard produce, we should remember that after all it is the ultimate goal of those who hopefully plunk seeds into the ground each spring.

In fact, the rewards can be most satisfying and help to ease the weeks of occasional hard labor and frequent picky chores. The peak picking season is what I refer to as my yearly "squirrelly" season. There certainly seems to be something instinctive about the compulsive gathering, packaging and "squirrelling" away of foods for the winter months.

It is only natural that many home gardeners who like to grow their own food also like to preserve it for maximum nutrition and attractiveness. For this reason, one good rule to follow is to gather only small batches at a time, cleaning and processing each small batch right away.

I have found that for many vegetables and fruits the garden hose is the quickest and most efficient cleaning tool. Just attach the spray nozzle and turn on the water full blast. This cleaning method is particularly effective for broccoli and cauliflower. Once the pieces are cut for freezing, turn the hose on each piece to dislodge any lurking visitors which, while they might add some protein to your diet, do nothing for the appetite if discovered on the plate.

This quick spray method is vastly preferable to soaking the vegetables because so many of the desired vitamins are water soluble. Carrots also come wonderfully clean, as do beets, new potatoes and other root vegetables, under this spray method. Just put the root vegetables in some perforated container so the water can run out and turn the jet of water on them full blast.

Once the vegetables are clean, try to avoid peeling them. It has been my experience over the years that fresh from the garden, my vegetables only rarely need to have this nutritious coating removed.

Haste in this case doesn't make waste in my view. With the ultimate in nutritional value in mind, I cut and process the vegetables just as quickly as possible. And I always steam ours because the steaming preserves color, taste and vitamins while dumping the food in boiling water leaches these things out, negating the advantages we home gardeners enjoy. I look upon our enamel steamers as just about the best investments we have made towards family health.

Almost all steamers come with charts indicating the steam-blanching times for each vegetable. However, if you do not have such a steam-blanching chart, simply add a minute or two to the boiling-water blanching time.

Once the vegetables are steam-blanched, I turn them out from the steamer on to those re-usable ice packs generally used for picnic coolers that you can buy in the supermarkets. These ice packs come in various sizes and shapes and are kept frozen for use in a corner of the deep freeze or in the freezer portion of the fridge. They come in very handy to quick-cool my steamed vegetables in preparation for freezing.

Again, this method is preferable to my way of thinking because dumping the food into cold water will tend to leach out the good things in the vegetables.

Around our place, one of the favorite home-frozen vegetables is peas. While the store-bought ones aren't all that bad, they can't hold a candle to the ones we pluck fresh from the backyard garden, swiftly process and rush to the freezer.

In processing these, I place whole branches of mint in the bottom of the steamer, in the water. The lovely mint flavor and aroma goes into the peas with the steam, at the same time filling the house with its wonderful scent.

Each time during the winter that we open a package of our peas, memories of summer come back with that lovely minty fragrance. I'll be continuing this discussion on processing in tomorrow's column.

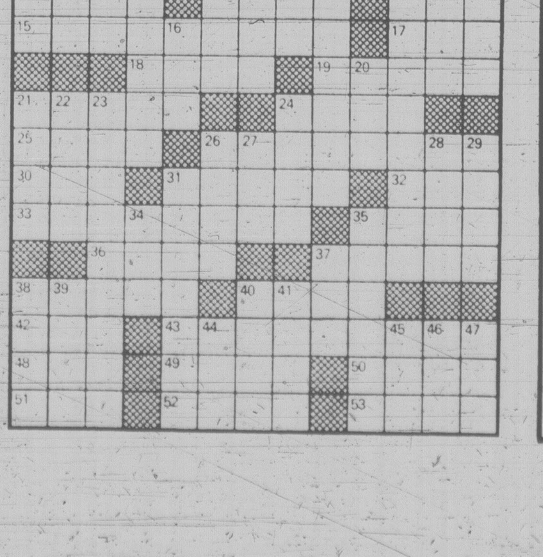
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Thai children sol on slave market

GENEVA (AP) — Thousands of Thai children are bought and sold each year on a professionally-operated market that supplies factories, brothels and massage parlors in Thailand with slave children, a United Nations human rights group was told today.

"Every day, girls as young as 11 or 12 years of age are being sold into brothels," said British social worker Timothy Bond. He told the UN Working Group on Slavery that he collected detailed evidence on the market during a five-month welfare mission in Thailand.

His report, presented on behalf of the London-based Minority Rights Group, said that children are sold for between 150 and 1,000 baht, ($7.50 to $50), "depending upon his or her age, strength and beauty."

He said he bought two boys, 12 and 13 years old, for 700 baht, or $35, from a professional child trader and then returned them to their home village.

"I still have the receipt and the sales contract," he added.

In the Bangkok railway station, a central trading point, more than 500 children are sold each week during dry season between November and April, he said.

The children are brought from northeastern Thailand by professional "child catchers" or by parents and relatives in search of "quick money," he said. The northeast is the poorest part of the country because the short monsoon season allows farmers to harvest only one rice crop each year, he said.

Bond told the working group that Thai police fail to enforce laws banning such sales and charged they are either bribed into silence or given free access to girls sold to brothels.

One way to fight the practice would be a UN program to fight poverty in Thailand through irrigation and development of local industries, Bond suggested.

Children brainwashed by Kabul government

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The Soviet-installed regime is brainwashing Afghan children with threats, beatings and political indoctrination until they swear to support the government, a former Afghan official charged.

The official said Monday his own son had been arrested and imprisoned for 23 days for participating in a shouting demonstration at a school six weeks ago against Afghan president Babrak Karmal's Parchamite faction.

"The new approach of (the president's) Parchamities is to arrest young students and boys between the ages of 13 and 21 in batches of 200 to 300 for a short period of 20 to 25 days," he said.

"During that time, they are subjected to threats, brainwashing and in a few cases physical violence."

"Many of these boys apparently fall in line by giving written assurances that they would not participate in anti-government movements and would inform on others if aproached to do so," he said.

The official, interviewed in New Dehli, said he did want to be identified because he was planning to return to Afghanistan.

He said new divisions within Karmal's Communist Party over the issues of law and order and the presence of Soviet troops have further weakened his government.

One faction, including Karmal supporters, insists the Afghan government which came to power with the Soviet invasion in December should have authority to interpret and apply Afghan laws and those of the People's Democratic Party.

A second group, calling itself nationalist, has publicly criticized Karmal for conducting a lawless state, saying he had identified his Parchamite followers in a series of murders and crimes against the Afghan people.

Warsaw workers walk off their jobs

WARSAW (AP) — A strike by workers in three of Warsaw's 10 bus depots entered its second day today and workers in about 200 factories in other cities in this Communist country walked out to demand higher wages, dissident sources said.

Although the bus drivers' strike closed only a third of the Warsaw depots, most of the city's bus drivers stayed home and the city was virtually without transportation, the sources said.

"Auxiliary drivers" operated several buses, and asked passengers to show them the regular routes, the sources said.

The strike began about mid-day Monday, but has been ignored by the state-controlled media.

The workers are demanding higher wages and improved management practices, and are protesting a shortage of meat and other foods, the sources said.

The dissidents had few details about the strikes in other Polish cities.

The transportation workers strike in Warsaw began two days after the city granted a $33 a month wage increase to sanitation workers, ending a six-day walkout Saturday, the sources said. Garbage collectors' now earn between $150 and $180 a month.

The average wage in Poland is $170 per month.

In another strike-related development, Polish authorities released a leader of the striking garbage men one day after his arrest. Marek Glesmann was the first member of a strike committee to be arrested since labor unrest broke out last month in Poland.

Nostalgia may be all Democrats have left

NEW YORK — In the basement of The Other End, a bistro in Greenwich Village where the folkies used to roam, Mary Travers wails out her sad song from beneath her rock-sided bangs.

This is nostaliga night, since Mary Travers was once rather better known as the girl in Peter, Paul and Mary — one of the classic successes of the folk singer era when college kids gathered to protest and songs were plaintive bleats against all authority.

Now middle-aged, but still wearing their protest jeans, the well-scrubbed Democrats from across the land chase past memories as they listen to Mary Travers in her sad little attempt to recapture a period that is long gone.

The party of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, meeting in his New York for the second straight time, seems not to have much to look forward to. Every poll indicates that Ronny Reagan (with his "Max Factor facism," as one local columnist bitterly decribes him) is far ahead of the bumbling Carter family.

The White House, inhabited by "Jimmy and Evita" is not seen as the home of leadership.

Even while Teddy Kennedy's desperate fight over convention rules was going on Monday night, a block away from Madison Square Garden, street vendors were selling Teddy Kennedy for Lifeguard buttons. It's a swell little party they've got here.

It was six years ago this weekend that Richard (I-am-not-a-crook) Nixon was forced to abdicate when even he couldn't keep up with his own lies. It seemed the Democrats would be home-free for years to come.

Now the party is split in two, not respecting Carter, but stuck with him.

Such is the crisis at the top that the party which has traditionally relied on the energy and drive of committed college kids seems about to go down to defeat to a 69-year-old rival.

It's not very inspiring.

What worries the poor Democrats as Carter flips and flops about in search of a policy, is that he may drag them down with him.

Presidents come and go, but Democratic control of Congress is what is important in a country where patronage rules government jobs down to minor judges and sheriffs.

The party still holds 59 of the 100 Senate seats and 274 of the 435 seats in the House of Representatives, but there's the fear that so many of them could go sliding along with Carter's unpopularity that those red-necked Reaganites could gain control of Washington as well as the White House.

It's why so many Congressmen are staying away from this convention — detecting that they can only be splattered in the blood-letting.

So we have a party stuck with a presidential candidate it doesn't really want but can't reject at this late hour, in a city that doesn't really see why its chaotic traffic should be diverted by the massive security arrangements around Madison Square Garden, covered by a mob of journalists who are furious with the Democrats for the fouled-up arrangements in the August heat.

The highlight of the whole convetion may come when the national anthem is sung Wednesday night by Willy Nelson, the country and western whisky tenor who ranks about as high now in the music business as Peter, Paul and Mary did 20 years ago.

He is lined and worn and rather scruffy and unkempt — just about the way the Democratic Party appears as it opens this convention.

Cold dunk a lifesaver in tumble?

COQUITLAM (CP) — Rescue officials say a dunking in a cold mountain stream probably saved the life of a seriously-injured man who had fallen 30 metres down a rock slide area of Eagle Mountain near Buntzen Lake.

Thirty men and three helicopters were marshalled over a 5½-hour period to bring Howard Heyden, 20, of New Westminster, to safety. He was in serious condition Monday in hospital.

Don Cunnings, Coquitlam emergency program director, said Heyden apparently got the break of his life when he came to rest in the cold stream after his fall.

He said Heyden was immersed in the water for several hours and the low body heat condition helped by letting his blood congeal and slowing his heart beat.

B.C. Rail's losses show slight drop

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Railway reports a net loss of more than $21.2 million during the first six months of this year, compared with a net loss of $26.6 million during the first six months of 1979.

The provincially-owned railway recorded an operating profit of more than $6 million in the six-month period ended June 30, compared with $702,000 in the same period last year.

Interest on its long-term debt in the latest period totalled more than $28.8 million, compared with $28.2 million during the first six months of 1979.

Bennett suing Stupich for newsletter comments

Premier Bill Bennett launched a libel action Monday against Dave Stupich over comments the Nanaimo NDP MLA made in a newsletter published July 30.

The newsletter — entitled Report from the Legislature — was mailed to Stupich's constituents and to three area newspapers.

Bennett's action, filed in B.C. Supreme Court, seeks general and punitive damages on the grounds the newsletter's allegations have seriously injured his character and have brought his reputation into public disapproval.

Stupich said he intends to ask fellow NDP MLA and former attorney-general Alex Macdonald to represent him in the action.

It was Macdonald who originally checked out the text of Stupich's newsletter and permitted it to be issued uncensored and unabridged.

Following the release of that July 30 newsletter, it appeared Stupich would escape with only an apology.

Stupich's Aug. 6 newsletter consisted of his reply to Butler and included an apology which apparently did not satisfy the lawyer.

In it, Stupich pointed out that Bennett apologized in the legislature for his "scotch and cornflakes" remark and said he was prepared to do the same for his own comments.

"I regret that the premier chose to use a legal firm to ask for an apology rather than follow the time-honored method of asking for such an apology in the house," he wrote.

An amusing and embarrassing sidelight to the situation is that Butler's letter stated: "We act for William A. C. Bennett" and suggested that Stupich had committed a very serious libel against William A. C. Bennett.

In his open letter of apology, Stupich says to Butler: "I think it is safe to asume that your client is actually William R. Bennett, Premier of B.C."

Just in case there is any doubt, he adds: "Let me make it absolutely clear that I intended no reflection upon the habits or character of our former premier, W. A. C. Bennett, deceased."

W.A.C., Stupich noted, was a teetotaler.

Alaska-bound skater stranded in interior

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — A one-armed Californian who says he's roller skating to Alaska for charity has had his journey temporarily halted in this Peace River community.

Lyle Telford, a 31-year-old former disc jockey, set out from Hayward, Calif., July 2 hoping to reach Homer, Alaska, by the end of September.

However, when Telford arrived here last week, the woman who had been driving his car decided to leave the project and the skater says he needs another driver before he can continue his 6,000-kilometre roller journey.

Telford says he began the trek to raise money for St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Telford is using skates equipped with extra-large skateboard wheels which make it easier to ride over rocky roads.

When the road becomes very rough, Telford said he planned to be pulled by his two sled dogs.
